182 Known Dead As Floods' Peril Mounts in West

Racing Waters Threaten More Destruction in Nebraska-Kansas.

$27,000,000 Loss Reported So Far

122 Mexicans Drown as Torrential Rain Swamps Valley.

The Flood Toll.

Nebraska reported 140 known flood dead and estimated damage in the Republican River Valley at more than $13,000,000. Damage in Missouri, Kansas, Wyoming and Colorado was put at $14,000,000.

Colorado reported 19 known dead, Kansas 8, Wyoming 5, Texas 6 and Oklahoma 1.

At least 122 died in the heavy floods in the Valley of Mexico.

By the Associated Press.

McCook, Nebr., June 3.—Nebraska counted its dead from last week's floods and tornadoes at 140 tonight as it battled against new flood threats in the Platte River Valley.

Damage to the Republican River Valley—seat of last week's disaster—was estimated at more than $13,000,000 as warnings went out late today to lowland dwellers near North Platte to evacuate and national guardsmen and able-bodied men were called out to fight the menace.

The danger developed when the South Platte River leaped its banks at North Platte and covered the only road connecting the outer world with McCook, hardest hit of the Republican Valley communities, under 3 feet of water.

Deaths Put at 140.

The Republican River region's dead were totaled at 140 by State Senator W. C. Bullard, chairman of the relief work at McCook.

Thirty-eight bodies were recovered and rescue crews continued search for the missing who numbered scores. Other scores were injured. Bullard in his report included some of the missing as dead. Other sources listed the known dead at 91.

Red Cross forces moved into the State and announced several million dollars would be needed for relief work. Gov. R. L. Cochran in Washington urged Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins to allocate funds for emergency needs and for reconstruction and rehabilitation in the devastated 200-mile long Republican River Valley in Nebraska and was assured of aid.

Lieut. Gov. Walter H. Jurgensen, temporarily the State's chief executive, traveled into the flood zone today to make a personal survey of the destruction.

Many Organizations Helping.

National Guard troops, called into action by Jurgensen, remained on duty and the Army, American Legion and many other organizations cooperated in providing relief and rescuing persons from treetops and other places, where they sought safety from the churning torrents.

Albert Evans, of St. Louis, in command of the Red Cross forces, met with Bullard and his committee and heard their reports of the destruction. Representatives of seven flood-swept counties attended the meeting and discussed plans for the immediate future.

Temporary headquarters of the Red Cross were established here, and clothing and food will be provided the refugees. One hundred and thirty-four families here will be given immediate assistance. Financial aid will be provided where it is necessary.

8 Deaths Reported From Kansas Flood

By the Associated Press.

Junction City, Kans., June 3.—Muddy flood waters of the Republican River surged eastward down the Kaw Valley from Junction City today, leaving death and desolation along its wake in north-central Kansas.

Two persons were drowned in north-central counties with, the possibility the death list would be increased as rescue parties searched inundated areas for several persons reported missing. The death toll for the State was placed tentatively at eight.

Damage from the floods was estimated unofficially at approximately $2,000,000 in Kansas, crop, live stock, highway and other losses. The State highway department estimated damage to roads and bridges alone at $1,000,000.

Rolling down from Nebraska last night, the Republican River flood waters washed out bridges, tore farm homes from their foundations, crept into many cities and inundated thousands of acres of valuable farm land. High waters reached here before noon and in a short time had blocked highways leading eastward to Fort Riley.

Joining the flooding Smoky Hill River here to form the Kaw River, the high water rushed on down the Girl Falls in Lake; Three Persons Die

By the United Press.

Mexico City, June 3.—Three persons died today when a girl fell out of a canoe into San Miguelito Lake.

Francisco Martinez lost his life when he tried to save the girl. Francisco's uncle died of a heart stroke when he heard of his nephew's death. The youth's sweetheart jumped from a window in her home and committed suicide, grief-stricken at his death. The girl who fell from the canoe was saved.

Italy Aroused As 30 Are Slain By Ethiopians

Rome Press Charges British Are Lending Arms and Encouragement.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, June 3.—A "nucleus of armed Ethiopians" attacked and killed 30 native Italian troops and stole several thousand head of cattle May 31 in the Dancali region, Italian authorities charged tonight in an official statement.

The authorities asserted the Ethiopian attack was made against a "small post of native gendarmes placed by us for the protection of the native population along the Eritrean frontier."

Their statement charged also that on the same day some 30 Ethiopians tried to shoot their way into the Italian military zone near Gublei in Italian Somaliland, but were repulsed with undetermined losses.

The latter attack, the officials said, was repulsed by Italian colonial troops known as "dubats."

Volley Greets Challenge.

The Gublei raiders were said to have been challenged by the Italian troops and promptly opened fire. The Italian forces responded and drove them off without suffering losses, but the Ethiopian ranks were reported to have suffered some losses.

The statement said concerning the Dancali affray that the commander of the zone will take "opportune measures" for defense.

Italian government circles discounted generally an idea that this most recent purported attack might be a "torch to a powder barrel."

They asserted Italy would proceed as usual through diplomatic channels of investigation. In unofficial circles it was asserted that in any event Italy would not be prepared for a war in East Africa until after the rainy season now inundating the section.

The tone of the Italian press toward England became the most bitter in history as the authoritative Giornale d'Italian in a front-page editorial accused Britain of furnishing Emperor Haile Selassie with arms and lending him moral encouragement.

American in Commission.

The conflict, it was said here tonight, occurred near a frontier post on the Uebi Scibelli River of Somaliland. This is about 200 miles southeast of Ualual, where a larger Italo-Ethiopian battle was fought some months ago.

The dispatch was received only a few hours after it was announced that a conciliation commission attempting to settle the dispute would hold its initial meeting Thursday in Milan. On the commission of five as one of Ethiopia's two representatives is an American, Pitman Benjamin Potter, author and former instructor in various universities in the United States.

Two vessels carrying more workers and troopers to Africa in Premier Mussolini's huge mobilization program left today.

N. Y. Hails Normandie as Records Fall

Treaty Renewed Otherwise, Price War Predicted as Clause Is Omitted.

By the Associated Press.

The United States and Germany yesterday signed an agreement retaining all provisions of the existing treaty of friendship, commerce and consular rights, except the unconditional most-favored-nation clause.

Under the latter clause, the two nations agree that if they give special concessions to one country, they do so to all.

The agreement was signed by Secretary Hull and Dr. Hans Luther, the German Ambassador.

In Berlin, both Germans and Americans feared a price war probably would result from the omission of the favored-nation clause.

The German government on October 13, 1934, gave notice of its intention to modify the existing treaty because of the most-favored-nation provision, to which Germany objected.

"Inasmuch as the treaty contains valuable provisions in respect of the residence and establishment of citizens of each country in the other country," the State Department announcement said, "and provisions relating to navigation and consular rights, the two governments agreed to the conclusion of a new agreement which in effect retains all provisions of the existing treaty except those which the German government had indicated a desire to modify."

Germany insisted upon elimination of the unconditional most-favored-nation provision on grounds that she was now forced to make special agreements with other nations in order to secure needed raw materials and the clause would impede the German program in making such agreements.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 3.—German and American circles foresaw languishing trade between the two nations tonight as the result of omission of the most-favored-nation clause from a Washington agreement extending a treaty of friendship, commerce and consular rights.

Germany long has been anxious to share the reciprocal trade agreements which the United States has been offering to other nations.

One German authority asserted the Germans are sorry they are not being considered for tariff reductions and expressed hope the two nations may agree to an arrangement whereby the Reich can increase its market in the United States for finished goods, at the same time buying more raw materials from America.

"Germany's viewpoint is that she desires to reach commercial pacts with countries aiding the German self-sufficiency program," he as-

Whistles Blow, Planes Soar, Ticker Tape Flies as New Queen of Seas Completes Atlantic Crossing in 4 Days 11 Hours 42 Minutes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Shattering all transatlantic speed records, the French liner Normandie, largest ship afloat, steamed into New York Harbor today on her maiden voyage to the acclaim of a city gone slightly hysterical.

Thousands lined the waterfront to watch the mammoth vessel proceed to her berth up the Hudson River. Every skyscraper in Manhattan that could afford a fair view held crowds of enthusiastic spectators.

Police officials said they believed the reception given the Normandie was second only to the accolade extended Col. Charles Lindbergh on his triumphal return from Paris.

But never had New Yorkers greeted with such cheering and fanfare a huge hulk of machinery with the personality furnished by size and beauty.

In snatching from the Italian liner Rex the mythical blue ribbon of the Atlantic, the Normandie averaged 29.64 knots on her crossing from Southampton to Ambrose Lightship, a distance of 3,192 miles.

The time of the triumphant trip by the new queen of the seas was four days 11 hours and 42 minutes. She made 748 miles one day and for an hour maintained a speed of 31.39 knots.

Planes Overhead.

Until today the swiftest crossing of the northern Atlantic had been made by the liner Bremen in four days, 16 hours and 15 minutes. The German ship's average speed was 28.51 knots.

The liner Rex, however, had made the southern Atlantic crosing in four days, 13 hours and 58 minutes. The Italian liner also held the record for daily distance, having made 736 miles. This was shaded by t[illegible] 748-mile record of the Normandie.

Long before the 79,280-ton vessel appeared in the Narrows, her progress could be marked by the swarm of airplanes roaring over her.

Any ship, even a tramp steamer, looms large when it passes into the Narrows, but the Normandie bulked so impressively that the tops of her squat funnels seemed on a level with highlands on either side of the passage.

About 100 smaller craft scurried about the Normandie as she lay at

House Passes Commodities' Trading Curb

Would Limit Exchanges on Wheat, Cotton and 10 Other Items.

By Robert C. Albright.

The commodities exchange bill, imposing a close regulatory curb on trading in wheat, cotton and ten other designated commodities, yesterday was swept through the House in ten minutes, under a rules suspension.

Passage came on a voice vote, with no extensive debate. Sequel to the securities exchange act of 1934, the bill was immediately forwarded to the Senate, where it encountered opposition.

"I intend to do nothing at all about it," said Chairman Ellison D. Smith of the Senate Agriculture Committee, which normally would hold hearings on the measure.

"I do not propose to put cotton in any such category. We have an arrangement now under the cotton futures act, which is working satisfactorily, and that's enough, in my opinion."

Minority Report Dissents.

Aside from a minority committee report by Representative Harry B. Beam (Democrat), Illinois, claiming "life and death control" is given the Secretary of Agriculture, no voice of opposition was raised in the House.

The bill extends the authority of a commission set up under the grain futures act, comprising the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce and the Attorney General. This would have power to fix limitations upon purely

Court Rejects Maryland Cut In Phone Rates

6-3 Decision Bars Slash Based on Commodity Price Dollar.

Assailing as "inapt and improper" the use of price indices in valuating public utilitiy property for rate-purposes, the Supreme Court, by a 6 to 3 decision, yesterday held invalid an order of the Maryland Public Service Commission reducing rates of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore.

The court, in an opinion written by Justice Owen Roberts, not only invalidated the price index formula in arriving at valuation, as used by the Maryland commission, but held such a method "is not calculated to obtain a fair or accurate result and should not be employed in the valuation of utility plants for rate making purposes."

At the same time the court disagreed with the methods used by the Federal District Court at Baltimore in fixing the telephone company's valuation, contending that the court used a cost-less-depreciation-reserves method, which was held to be "as arbitrary as that of the commission."

Justice Harlan F. Stone read a vigorous dissent from the majority's opinion. With Justices Louis D. Brandeis and Benjamin N. Cardozo, concurring in his views, Justice Stone contended the majority had not undertaken to say whether the value set by the Maryland Public Service Commission would be confiscatory, but decided the case on the grounds that the commission had followed erroneous procedure. He maintained the Supreme Court had held otherwise in previous rulings.

The opinion of the minority, while not binding but nevertheless significant, contended that the fact that the rates set by the commission would permit a return of only 4½ per cent on the basis of a valuation approved by the district court, was not conclusive evidence of confiscation.

"The general conditions of the money market and the rate of return on invested capital may have a controlling influence in determining the issue of confiscation," Justice Stone asserted. "There is at least grave doubt whether a return of 4½ per cent is so out of line with the current yield on invested capital as to be deemed confiscatory."

The majority, ruling out the method of computing value, did not consider the question of return. The reference of the minority to it was contained in the first reference to come from that court on the effect of the existing cheap money market on determining utility rates—observations which may become important in the future.

The Baltimore telephone decision was the only one of national importance handed down by the court yesterday as it completed the 1934-

Highest Court Leaves Capitol For New Home

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Simply and quietly, without fanfare or ceremony—indeed, without its usual solemnity—the United States Supreme Court yesterday ended a 75-year occupancy of its historic chamber under the dome of the Capitol.

Buffetted about from place to place, a homeless ward of Congress, whose actions it has so often restrained, the Supreme Court next October for the first time will meet in a building of its own, the elaborate $10,000,000 marbled palace of justice which is nearing completion across the East Plaza of the Capitol.

For the purpose of the historian, the Supreme Court a week ago wrote finis to the chapter marking its sessions in the old Senate Chamber of the Capitol. Everything that happened yesterday was trivial and unimportant compared with the momentous decisions of the previous week, which have so stirred the Nation.

An Epochal Decision.

As the developments of the last week have indicated, the court's decision in the NRA case may become an event as epochal as many of those which took place in this chamber in the last 135 years, as important in its effect on the future history of the country as Jefferson's inaugural speeches, ratification of the Louisiana Purchase and the Monroe Doctrine, the Webster-Hayne debate and the determination of the Hayes-Tilden presidential election contest.

Through each of these events, from the first session of the Senate in this chamber down through the years to the Supreme Court's unanimous pronouncement of a week ago, has run a single thread—adherence to and reverence for the Constitution.

When the nine black-robed justices of the court entered the chamber at noon yesterday, their demeanor was no different from any of the entrances they have made for many years. The small semicircular room, so like a Greek theater, was crowded to standing room, but the tension that electrified the air last week was absent.

Novices Are Present.

Many of those filling the seats were novices in the law, there to be admitted to practice at the bar of this high tribunal. But there were others attracted by the historical importance of the day. It was this which brought Charles Warren, historian of the Supreme Court, and Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, who Sunday night raised his forceful voice in defense of the court's NRA decision.

Quickly the court went to work. Justice Owen J. Roberts, as is his custom, rapidly gave a recital from memory of the decision of a majority of the court holding invalid the use of a price index formula by the Maryland Public Service Commission in evaluating the property of

Roosevelt Calls Cabinet on NRA; Staff Kept Intact

Richberg Told to Hold All Employes After June 16.

New Program Believed Ready

Congress Chiefs, Legal Aids Also Summoned to Conference.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt late yesterday called a special meeting of the Cabinet for 11:30 a. m. today to discuss NRA legislation. The meeting will be followed at 3 p. m. by a conference including congressional leaders, to be followed by a special press conference at which he is expected to announce his plans.

Announcement of the series of conferences followed a call at the White House by Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, during which Richberg was instructed to keep the NRA organization intact after June 16, when the present law expires.

Those invited to attend the afternoon conference include Attorney General Cummings, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Solicitor General Reed, Richberg, Speaker Byrns, Senators Robinson, of Arkansas; Harrison, of Mississippi; Wagner, of New York; Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee, and Charles O. West, Administration liaison officer with Congress.

Plan Believed Ready.

The unexpected moves were taken to indicate that the President is ready to present a definite plan for continuing [illegible]. It is assumed that he has a bill, or at least an outline of a bill drafted, and that he expects to present it to the Cabinet, legal advisers and members of Congress for approval. The invitation to Chairman O'Connor was taken as an indication that a special rule will be sought to jam the measure through the House immediately.

President Roosevelt yesterday continued his series of conferences on NRA, but there was no indication that he had suggested a definite plan to any of his visitors. Among them were Speaker Byrns, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and four members of the Business Advisory Council of the Commerce Department. They were Harry Kendall, chairman of the council; William Wetherow, who also is a member of the NIRB; Walter Teagle, and Douglas Stewart.

One proposal for legislation is that a law could be enacted defining unfair trade practices as applied to business in interstate commerce. A definition of interstate commerce that would approximate that laid down by the Supreme Court could be written into the act. In addition, it was stated, the President could approve agreements made privately among business concerns, after they were examined to show that they did not violate anti-trust laws. Labor provisions might be left to the Wagner bill.

Amendment Not Discussed.

Senator O'Mahoney, after his call on the President, suggested that interstate business could be subjected to a licensing system through provisions for Federal incorporations.

Speaker Byrns insisted that the President had not discussed a constitutional amendment to give Congress more power in the regulation of business. Following the President's statements last week concerning the Supreme Court decision, it has been believed generally that he would propose such an amendment.

Byrns said nothing definite had been determined and that he did not expect a definite announcement before next week. President Roosevelt expects to be in Hyde Park most of next week, and it now appears that he plans to take his con-

American Messiahs

By the Unofficial Observer

(Copyright, 1935, Simon & Schuster, Inc.)

Installment XVII—Marx on the Half-Shell (Part 1)

This is the seventeenth installment of "American Messiahs," by the Unofficial Observer, author of the "New Dealers," which appeared last year. While "American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post, it is commended as a most candid discussion of the mavericks, the reformers and the radio spellbinders, now booming their way across the American political stage.

The Socialist Party faces two great obstacles in its effort to convert the American people to the Marxian theory. The first of these obstacles is the American people; the second is the Socialist Party.

Americans seem to have an invincible distaste for anything complex, articulate or precise in the way of political theory. They will fight to "free the slaves" or "make the world safe for democracy," but won't bother to register their votes for or against industrial democracy or the cooperative commonwealth. The Marxians, on the other hand, whether of Socialist or Communist persuasion, have made political theory a subject only slightly less complicated than a fifty-move queen's pawn's defense set-to between Lasker and Capablanca. Worse still, from the American point of view, is the fact that the Socialist Party is confined largely to foreign-language circles in a few major cities—New York, Milwaukee, Chicago—and is alien in blood as well as in doctrine.

Except for the truly contemptible leadership of American Communism and its subservience to the political interests of the government of the Soviet Union, the party of "direct action" would long since have displaced the party of propaganda as head and front of the Marxian movement in the United States. As it is, American Communism is still a negligible force which confines itself to trouble-making and religious squabbles as to Party doctrine, while American Socialism, with the help of highly literate white-collar propagandists such as Norman Thomas, has become the most powerful educative force in American politics.

In fact, the historic mission of American Socialism seems to be to anticipate and formulate the poli-

Two District Residents Draw Horses in Rich Sweepstakes

The thunder of hoofs at Epson Downs to decide the winners in the Irish Sweepstake will be echoed by pounding hearts in Washington tomorrow.

Nine persons here drew lucky tickets in the great Dublin lottery and two of them stand to win a fortune. Both could use the money.

No matter what happens, even if their horses should be scratched, each of the men will get $3,000. If the horse of either of them should win, he would get $150,000.

The seven Washingtonians who will get consolation prizes of $500 each are Sohachi Goto, manager of a gift shop at 827 Fourteenth street northwest; Harvey Clay Danner, 230 Rhode Island avenue northeast, a clerk in the AAA; Mrs. Laura Warburton, 2815 Brentwood road northeast, wife of an attorney; Mrs. Annie Whitney, of 2334 Ontario road northwest; Chris James, of North Capitol street; Dagney Holman, of Ingraham street northwest, and a person who gave the pseudonym of "Midday," Twenty-first street northwest.

100,949 Work for U. S. in City, Only 17,000 Short of War Peak

Passing the 100,000 mark in the District alone for the first time since the Armistice, Federal employment figures in April broke all peace-time records with a total of 709,977 persons working for the Government. This does not include the 334,093 Emergency Conservation workers, 25,541 special employes of the Department of Agriculture nor the judicial, legislative and military branches of the Government.

In announcing these figures, the Civil Service Commission pointed out that the number of Federal employes in the District was gradually creeping up to wartime proportions. The number, 100,949, is within 17,000 of the war peak.

Total pay rolls also, it was announced, have reached new highs for peacetime. In April Uncle Sam spent $106,744,129 to meet the monthly pay roll.

Nationwide Federal totals were not so close to the wartime peak as those for the District. At one time during the war 917,760 persons were working for the Government, 207,783 more than in April.

April's flures showed a 25,059 increase over those for March, an increase mostly in the Interior, Agriculture and War departments—presumably for additional personnel to handle the works-relief program. This was the largest jump since March, 1933, when the present Administration took office.

These figures show that one-half of 1 per cent of the population works for Uncle Sam.

Deadlock Halts Rewrite Work OnBanking Bill

Glass Sub-Committee Defers Credit Control Action to Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

"Badly split"—as one Senator put it—over credit control provisions of the Administration's banking bill, a Senate sub-committee yesterday deferred until tomorrow any effort to start rewriting the House-approved measure.

After closing a month and a half of public hearings on the controverted legislation, one of the last of the major proposals on President Roosevelt's program, the Banking sub-committee headed by Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, conferred for an hour in executive session. But it reached no decision on whether the heart of the bill—placing monetary and credit control in the Federal Reserve Board—should be cut out as Glass favors.

The Virginian would not say what took place behind closed doors of the committee room. But another Senator indicated the sub-committee would compromise the credit sections rather than eliminate them. He contended, however, that no members of the group favored the credit provisions approved by the House.

Three Members For It.

Before closing the hearings, which developed strong opposition, principally from bankers, the Glass group heard three more members of the Reserve Board indorse the bill, making a majority of that agency's appointive members in favor of centralizing credit supervision in Washington.

The three who advocated the measure yesterday — some with modifications — were Charles S. Hamlin, a veteran member of the board; J. J. Thomas, its vice governor, and the newest member, M. S. Szymczak.

Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the board, who drafted the credit control section, previously had urged the measure as an essential part of the recovery program and denied it would make the Reserve system a football of politics.

Publisher Favors Bill.

Two other board members, George R. James and Adolph C. Miller, had declared the legislation unnecessary at this time, but Miller had indorsed the credit control features if Congress thought the bill should be passed now.

The three who testified yesterday followed J. David Stern, Philadelphia newspaper publisher, who said he sincerely believed the bill was "a great forward step toward modernization and rationalization of our monetary system."

Hamlin supported the measure because he believed it would "be to the greatest good of the people and incidentally to the good of the bankers themselves that the issue be settled now."

Thomas said he was "in harmony with the objectives of the bill" and with what Hamlin said. Contending open market operations were not regional in scope, he said their control should be in some central body, but Thomas advocated more autonomy for the 12 Reserve banks as far as purely banking functions are concerned, as did Szymszak.

Urges Independence.

Hamlin assailed critics who contended the bill established a central bank and made credit control subject to political domination. He said the term "central bank" had been used as a "terrible epithet" by bill opponents, yet each Federal Reserve bank today was nothing more than a central bank as far as power was concerned.

Making the Reserve board as independent as possible was urged by Hamlin, who said if it was not free from outside influence it should be made so, and "two-thirds of the opposition to the bill will disappear."

He also advocated retention of the Secretary of the Treasury on the Reserve board as ex-officio member to keep the board informed as to Treasury policies and criticized Owen D. Young, industrialist, for being too "nervous and scared" over the bill's provisions. He said the bill contained few new powers for the board and was "not radical."

Stern told the sub-committee "political control (of the Nation's credit) is certainly better than private banker control—judging by past experience."

Communist's Trial Delayed.

San Francisco, June 3 (AP).—Trial of Charlotte Anita Whitney, Communist Party candidate for State controller in the election last November, on a charge of perjury growing out of the filing of petitions to place Communist candidates on the November ballot was postponed today until June 17.

Between You and Me

Mr. Hoover Paints a Riley-esque Picture, but: a Kansas Farmer Likes the AAA.

By Raymond Clapper

SPEAKING in Iowa where he lived as a boy, Herbert Hoover described the life and times of the true American rugged individualist with the whimsical reminiscence which reveals him at his best.

The sod house of the pioneer, small boys picking potato bugs at a penny a hundred, "hard times" which were always blamed on the Democrats, the soap kettle, canning time and the other farm scenes made unforgetable by James Whitcomb Riley were all recalled as the background of the real folks of the middle border. They were people who built America without political bureaucracy, codes, crop curtailment. They lived "the real abundant life that comes from matching one's wits, one's character and one's skill with his fellows."

It was a picture of America as most of us like to think of it. Mr. Hoover sketched the healthy, simple life, close to the soil, which produced the generation that left the farm, went to the big city, became the typical New Yorker's and flowered in what seemed at the time to be one of the great achievements of mankind, next as the rapid developement of the country in the first 30 years of the century to the point where prosperity, education, health, material comforts and general enrichment of life were shared by millions to the envy of the whole world.

But just after Mr. Hoover's speech came in over the wires, a slightly disturbing thing happened. A Mr. Fishman walked into the office—Senator Simon Fishman, of Kansas, from Greeley County, out along the Colorado line, where the dust storms blow.

Mr. Fishman also is a rugged individualist, and a typical American. True, he was born in Russia, and came to America at the age of 13. But that was more than 40 years ago, before immigration restriction. He was one of millions who sought to escape from the grinding poverty of Europe and seek an opportunity in free America. Such immigrants were accepted as real Americans in spirit and they contributed notably to building up the country. Mr. Fishman was able to attend school only for a year. Then he had to earn his own way. As a lad he swung a pack on his back and peddled in Oklahoma, Texas, eastern Colorado and Nebraska.

He settled in a small Nebraska town, was elected mayor and was county treasurer. In 1920 he moved to western Kansas and began gathering up farm land. He grew wealthy and finally controlled 16,000 acres. He was probably the second largest wheat farmer in the country.

He settled in Tribune, the county seat of Greeley County, built the first elevator there, started a store and became the leading citizen. In 1927 he was elected as a Republican to the Kansas Legislature. In 1932 he was elected to the State Senate. There were only two other Jewish families in his district. He carried 15 of the 18 counties.

He revelled in the prosperity which he had won by his own efforts. He wore $200 suits—in Kansas—and buckskin shoes.

"I dressed as well as the best of them," Mr. Fishman says proudly. "I built a fine house. I had everything I wanted."

The rugged individualist had arrived.

Then something happened. He had rented out his land and his farmers couldn't make their payments. They still harvested good crops, but the wheat didn't bring in the money. He was a Republican, but his wheat went down to 25 cents and he was hanging on the ropes. He couldn't borrow on it. That was in 1931. He began wearing $35 suits.

He ran for the State Senate in 1932 when Mr. Roosevelt was a candidate for President. Mr. Fishman supported the Republican ticket. He thought rugged individualism would pull the farmer through.

Then in the spring of 1933, he heard about AAA. He and his tenants signed wheat curtailment contracts. The price began to go up and the benefit payments began to come in. His share runs perhaps $1,800, or slightly more a year. His tenants are getting along better. So although a Republican, Mr. Fishman became a champion of AAA. Finally AAA engaged him as a lecturer to plug the crop curtailment program with the farmers. He spoke the farm language. Secretary Wallace called him to Washington this week to let him see how the wheels go around here.

"Sure," he says, "I'm an individualist, but you got to have crop control. I don't care anything about these alphabetical things. They got too many of them. If they run out of alphabets I'll throw in the Hebrew alphabet for them. But they don't need a lot of these things they have been doing with NRA. All I'm interested in is crop control. I don't care what you call it. You have got to have it if you don't want to drive the farmers to peasantry. That's why I'm for the triple A."

Senator Borah, who usually uses simple words and exercises exceptional restraint, has run out of ordinary terms of reproach for the New Dealers. He finally found a term which he thought fully voiced his contempt. He called them "bureaucratic ascaridae."

The ascaridae, it was learned later with the aid of the dictionary, is a family of parasitic nematoid worms with three lips, among other things.

That is, a worm that talks back at you.

Bonus Meeting Today to Press A Compromise

Administration Approval Forecast for New Plan of Cash Payment.

By the Associated Press.

A new bonus compromise proposal, which proponents yesterday hinted they thought acceptable to Administration forces, will be considered today at a meeting of leading congressional advocates of cash payment legislation.

The new proposition would move up the date of maturity of adjusted service certificates to November 11, 1938, with a provision permitting veterans to cash them any time at their actual face value at that time.

Under existing law, the certificates issued as of January 1, 1925, mature January 1, 1945. The new proposal, which was discussed yesterday by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, and Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, would merely change the date of issue to November 11, 1918, and authorize immediate cash payment of the cash value on a discount basis.

Strategy behind the proposition, proponents said, is to meet the objections President Roosevelt made to the Patman cash bonus bill in his veto message to Congress—that the obligation was not due until 1945 and that the Government at this time owed the possessor of a $1,000 certificate only $750.

A spokesman for the group said yesterday that under existing contracts, the veterans "lose six years interest between the end of the war, November 11, 1918, and January 1, 1925, the date of issue."

"Veterans actually are entitled to the bonus, under the 20-year contracts, from the end of the war," he said, "and there would be no justification for a veto of this measure which merely changes the date of issue and maturity."

In addition, this spokesman, who declined to let his name be used, said: "We have reason to believe that the Administration now wants to dispose of the bonus question before the 1936 election, particularly in view of recent developments on the NRA and other New Deal legislation."

The spokesman said it had not been determined how the necessary money should be raised, but added that "we probably will have to make a concession on the issuance of new currency."

Ed Howe Under Knife, Hopes to Regain Sight

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 3.—Ed W. Howe today underwent an operation which physicians at the Johns Hopkins Hospital were very hopeful would restore the 82-year-old Atchinson (Kan.) journalist's failing sight.

Cataracts were removed from the editor's left eye by Dr. Alan C. Woods, director of the Wilmer Clinic.

The patient was said to have stood the operation well.

William Holden to Give Recital for Diploma

William Holden, who is receiving an artist's diploma in piano from the Washington College of Music at its thirty-first annual commencement, will play the required recital on Saturday night at the college. He is a pupil of Fanny Amstutz Roberts and of Edwin Hughes, of New York, guest teacher of piano.

His program will include Beethoven's 32 variations on an original theme, Schumann's "Faschingschwank aus Wien," Brahms' Capriccio in D minor, Intermezzo in E flat and Rhapsody in B minor, Skryabin's "Poeme Satanique," one of Henry Cowell's "Ings," and one of David Guion's "Alley Tunes."

Mr. Holden has the degree of bachelor of arts from the Georgetown University and spent a year at the University of Grenoble in France. Having received from the Washington College of Music his teacher's diploma and the degree of bachelor of music, he became a member of the faculty of the institution in 1933.

Breckinridge Assails New Deal 'Debt Factory'

Greenville, Tenn., June 3 (AP).—Col. Henry Breckinridge, of New York, formerly Assistant Secretary of War, told 35 graduating students of Tusculum College here today that "the greatest debt factory that the world has ever seen" now exists in Washington.

Col. Breckinridge received the degree of doctor of law.

In his address, Col. Breckinridge said debt is being created in Washington at the rate of $13,000 a minute and that this will be paid in the proportion of $6 by taxation to $7 by borrowing.

Man Cost Cut, Work Program Hits New Snag

Only 22 Projects Approved by Allotment Board, Pending Reductions.

The $4,000,000,000 works program had admittedly run into at least a temporary snag yesterday, when the allotment board decided that on projects now under consideration the cost per man must be reduced before they can be approved.

Under the plan to put 3,500,000 persons to work, the average cost of projects, including wages and materials, can not be more than about $1,100 per man employed.

On some projects already approved, because of high material costs, the estimated cost per man runs as high as $3,000. The average, however, is below $2,000.

Won't Affect Wages.

It was made plain that insistence that material costs must be lowered would have no affect on the amount of wages paid. It may, however, prevent approval of many such costly projects as housing and grade elimination. Many of the projects already approved include PWA construction on which material costs is particularly high. They also include housing, roads, rivers and harbors, and rural resettlement.

The allotment board recommended the smallest number of propects approved at any of its meetings. It recommended 22 miscellaneous projects exepected to cost approximately $13,629,700. Proposals for large allotments for soil erosion and forestation will be subjected to further study before they are approved, it was announced.

The question of filling the quota of CCC camps up to 600,000 was discussed in the light of information that if only men within the present age limit of 18 to 28 years are enrolled from the relief rolls, there will be a shortage of men to fill the quota. It was suggested that the age limit be increased and more single men enrolled. Only men on relief are eligible.

Business Census.

The Commerce Department yesterday proposed that it be allotted $9,370,000 for a census of business. The investigation would be centered on distribution of business and would be independent of the census of manufactures. Other non-manufacturing businesses, however, probably would be included. Headquarters for the census would be in Baltimore, because, it was reported, difficulty has been experienced in finding suitable office space here.

Meanwhile, Harry L. Hopkins, progress director of the works program, accepted an invitation to speak to the Governors of the States at their annual meeting next week in Biloxi, Miss. The Governors will include a number upon whom Hopkins has cracked down for their failure to come up to his expectations in co-operating with the Government in relief expenditures.

Hopkins announced that the FERA is acting to prevent suffering in the flooded area in the West.

Millen-Faber Trio Lose Death Fight

New Trial Refused, as Is Stay of Sentence.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 3.—The law today plugged up the last loopholes through which the Millen-Faber gang of slayers hoped to escape the electric chair, and tonight plans were being completed to put them to death shortly after midnight Thursday or Friday.

The United States Supreme Court today rejected a petition to give Murton and Irving Millen, brothers, and Abraham Faber, brilliant university graduate, a new trial.

Then Federal Judge Hugh D. McClellan in U. S. District Court here refused to stay the sentence.

Attorney General Paul A. Dever tonight heard Attorney William Scharton's petition for removal of Gov. James M. Curley from office on the ground he had not been given the oath of office properly. Gov. Curley had refused to interfere with the sentence.

Tokyo, June 3 (U.P.).—The Japanese military today formally announced they had notified the North China authorities that officials responsible for anti-Japanese agitation must be dismissed, and demanded that anti-Japanese organizations in the Peiping-Tientsin area below the Great Wall be surpressed.

The statement failed to mention any threats of armed measures to be taken in the event the Chinese refuse to comply.

Bank Records Are Subpenaed In Mellon Case

Government Counsel Wins Fight to Scan Items of Union Trust Co.

After a long fight, the United States Board of Tax Appeals yesterday was persuaded by Robert H. Jackson, chief of Government counsel, to subpena the records of the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh, as evidence in the $3,089,000 income tax case against Andrew W. Mellon, form Secretary of the Treasury and Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

Twenty-four separate items are listed in the subpena. These items deal with the connections of A. W. and R. B. Mellon, his deceased brother, with the bank, transactions in Pittsburgh Coal Co. shares and stocks, in shares of Western Public Service Corporation, Westinghouse Electric, American Locomotive, Nash motors and several other issues.

As the hearing got under way Mr. Jackson disclosed the subdivision of the Board of Tax Appeals hearing the case had reconsidered its previous refusal and issued a subpena.

Defense Objects.

Chief of Defense Counsel Frank Hogan said that in behalf of his client he would object strenuously to the evidence sought by the Government.

The subpena also demands records of stock purchase slips, minute books, sales slips, correspondence, contracts and agreements, election records and other documents, which must be produced tomorrow, under the terms of the subpena.

Should the Union Trust Co. fail to act on the subpena, Mr. Jackson said yesterday he will throw the entire case back to the Federal courts in Pittsburgh.

The Mellon hearing is in its sixteenth week, and indications were yesterday it might last another two weeks here.

In its efforts yesterday to show that through Frank E. Taplin, Cleveland coal merchant, Mr. Mellon disposed of stock in the Pittsburgh Coal Co. to the Mellon-controlled Union Trust Co. in such a manner as to establish a fictitious loss the Government was unsuccessful, however.

Witness Adds Little.

Mr. Taplin, president of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railroad, a director of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad and head of the North American Coal Co., added little, if anything, to the Government's case.

Defense Attorney Hogan's vigorous objections to Jackson's question as to what Taplin would have been willing to pay for Mellon's holdings of Pittsburgh Coal common in 1931 were sustained and the question ruled out.

"We're not going to try an anti-trust case," snapped Hogan as he offered the objections.

A few minutes before this, however, Taplin testified he had held stock in the Pittsburgh Coal Co. since 1928.

"The amount may be as much as 20,000 shares," he told the Board of Tax Appeals.

Ernest H. Van Fossan, presiding member of the board, also refused to admit, after argument, the late R. B. Mellon's income tax return as evidence.

The hearing was adjourned late yesterday until tomorrow.

Sales Tax Valid, Arkansas Ruling

Officials Move to Begin Collecting Levy.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., June 3.—The Arkansas Supreme Court today ruled that a general 2 per cent sales tax is valid under this State's constitution, and revenue officials moved to start collecting the levy on or about June 21.

The seven justices overruled a test case in which a taxpayer claimed the tax was a double property tax, an occupational tax and discriminatory.

The sales tax, said the high court, "is an excise or privilege tax that is not prohibited under our constitution."

The tax was adopted by the 1935 Legislature to raise an estimated $2,500,000 a year for public schools and other purposes. With today's ruling the tax becomes collectable after 17 days unless a motion for rehearing is filed within that period. The tax revenues are dedicated 65 per cent to common schools and 35 per cent to the State's general fund.

Hoover Warns Iowa to Insist OnCompetition

This Is Most Crucial Period Since Civil War, He Tells Drake U.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 3.—Herbert Hoover told Drake University seniors they were entering "life at the most crucial period of American history since the Civil War" and warned them against those who would limit "open competition."

The only native of this State ever to attain the Presidency was honored by the Drake faculty with a doctor of laws degree at conclusion of his commencement address.

Speaking before an audience estimated by university officials at 3,500 persons, he advised the graduating class:

"You should be suspicious of any proposal that asks you to forego the rightful exercise of your muscles and your might, of any governmental action which limits your opportunities to work and produce."

"I am troubled with just one thing," Hoover told the class of '35. "That is what the forces of government may impose on you that will limit and destroy your inspirations, your incentives and your opportunities."

"Some people would like to mobilize you into a political bureaucracy to run this civilization," the former Chief Executive said. "But some of us hold that the jobs should go to those who win them fairly by merit in open competition with their fellows in the stimulating air of freedom."

The former President used his own experiences as a boy on an Iowa farm to recall the State's progress and added:

"The times were harder sometimes than at others and it was well known that they would be harder if the Democrats won an election."

Hoover said he did not agree with "exponents of the new social order" who "would dim some of your hopes by telling you that hope, new adventure and new opportunity have departed."

Friends here said the trip to Oregon was made at invitation of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who resides there at his Sinissippi farm. The former Governor was one time a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

RFC Reports Industry Loans Of $75,948,041

2 Debtor Railroads Are Warned to Speed Up Reorganization.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation had authorized up to May 18 a total of $75,948,041 in loans to industrial and commercial applicants, while participating banks had taken an additional $4,060,265 Chairman Jesse H. Jones announced yesterday.

Of the loans to industry, 73.6 per cent were to be used for working capital and the remainder for payment of bank loans, payment of taxes, payment of trade debts, payment of mortgages, and construction, repairs and replacements.

Of the total of industrial and commercial loans 40.3 per cent were in amounts of $10,000 or less and 88.8 per cent were $100,000 or less.

Chairman Jones, meanwhile, warned two debtor railroads that unless early reorganization plans were submitted, the RFC would "feel constrained to prepare and file one" with the Interstate Commerce Commission. The warnings were dispatched to the Western Pacific Railroad and the Denver & Rio Grande & Western Railroad, affiliated companies.

Boy's Kin Owns Tan Car Found In Kidnap Hunt

Abductors Believe Drove Auto to Seattle After Ransom Payment.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., June 3.—A motor car found abandoned in Seattle was disclosed tonight to be a vital clew in the Government's determined drive to trap little George Weyerhaeuser's kidnapers, now indicated as being members of a Northwest criminal ring.

The car, a tan sedan owned by F. Rodman Titcomb, uncle of the ransomed 9-year-old timber fortune heir, presumably was used to convey $200,000 to the abductors a few hours before they released their victim.

"Yes, that is my car," Titcomb said, breaking a silence he has maintained since George was returned home Saturday.

At the same time it appeared that suspicion against the notorious gang of Alvin Karpis, co-engineer of the $200,000 Edward G. Bremer kidnaping, was on the wane and that a band of Northwestern outlaws were being sought.

Department of Justice agents holding Volney Davis, Karpis lieutenant, in St. Paul on a Bremer kidnaping case charges, said they had learned he was not in Tacoma during the week of the Weyerhaeuser abduction.

Bill Numbers Listed.

At the same time the Federal men distributed lists containing the numbers of the bank notes given the kidnapers. Strategic points were asked to watch for the bills.

The Weyerhaeuser boy named Titcomb as the pay-off man and there were reports that the abductors seized the car and forced the uncle to walk for several miles after making the payment. The sedan was found in Seattle a few hours after George turned up safely.

Department of Justice agents seized the auto at once.

It became known tonight they had guarded it rigidly and presumably had gone over it for fingerprints and other potential evidence.

If Government criminologists can do with the automobile what Walter J. Koehler, Government wood expert, did with the Lindbergh kidnap ladder, it may tell them a long story about the kidnapers.

Any fingerprint obtained will open the way toward determining whether the car was used by any one of the thousands of criminals in the records of the Bureau of Identification.

New information concerning how contact was arranged with Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, parents of the boy, came from close family sources, which said but one ransom note was received.

Telephone conversations to which Justice Agents in the house could have listened were understood to have been the other means of communication.

Payment Still Veiled.

No definite information could be obtained as to when and where the ransom was paid and neither Titcomb nor justice agents would comment on reports the meeting place was near Elma, about 60 miles southwest of here.

Titcomb, a high official in the wealthy Weyerhaeuser lumber organization, would not affirm or deny that the car had been taken from him by the abductors.

The fact the vehicle was found abandoned in Seattle gave definite indications at least some members of the gang had fled in that direction.

Belief the kidnap gang still was in the Pacific Northwest or at least on the coast, was strengthened when it was said there would be more safety in passing the ransom money here than in the East.

The $200,000 fund, all except nine bills in San Francisco Federal Reserve notes, would be less easily detected in this region than elsewhere because bills of that series are more common here, it was pointed out.

Agents Noncommittal.

Oregon officers still sought a mystery tan motor car, carrying five or six men, which outdistanced pursuers in a wild chase through the Umatilla country near Pendleton, Saturday night and Sunday.

Whether the car contained the kidnapers, said by George to number six men, was not known, but Oregon authorities felt certain their blockade would prevent the car from escaping the State.

Justice Department agents both here and in Washington remained non-committal as man-hunters continued to scour the Northwest for traces of the fleeing snatchers, but some of the clews originally pointing toward members of the Karpis gang still had not been cleared up.

Little George's story of "Harry Bill and Allen"—or "Alvin"—first taken as an indication the kidnapers might have been Karpis and two of his known pals, Harry Campbell and William Weaver—was presented with a new interpretation.

It was considered possible that the kidnapers, noting mention of Karpis and his gangsters in stories of the abduction, assumed those names in order to divert suspicion away from themselves and toward the Bremer kidnapers.

The fact that descriptions of three suspects broadcast yesterday by Justice Department authorities did not tally with members of the Karpis gang lent strength to the assumption another group was being hunted.

The clamp of silence still was imposed today on the Weyerhaeuser family and it was impossible to learn what part they might be taking in efforts to capture the abductors of their son, who was held prisoner nearly eight days.

Not at School Today.

Both the family and George's school refused information on whether he would attend classes this week, the last of the term.

The curly-haired lad was not at school today.

Reports that an old model typewriter had been determined as the machine on which the ransom note was written could not be confirmed here at Department of Justice headquarters, which "knew nothing about that."

Gangster Files Plea of Guilty In Bremer Case

Davis, Facing Life Term in Kidnaping, Is 'Glad to Get It Off His Chest.'

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Minn., June 3.—Glad, he said, to "get it off his chest," Volney Davis, known to Department of Justice agents as one of the slipperiest and toughest members of the Barker-Karpis mob, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to kidnap Edward G. Bremer for $200,000 today.

"It's no use trying to beat these G-guys," said Davis, after pleading before Federal Judge M. M. Joyce.

He will be sentenced Friday, with life imprisonment the possible penalty. He was accused of being one of the St. Paul banker's actual kidnapers.

"They had it on me," Davis added. "The minute they read that indictment I could see they knew as much about this kidnaping as I did."

Details brought out by the Government in the trial of Arthur (Doc) Barker, Davis said, had a lot to do with his decision to plead guilty. "I could see they had the straight stuff—almost exactly as it was pulled. I'm glad it's over with. I'll take the book (life imprisonment) and be done with the thing."

While life is the maximum sentence that can be imposed on Davis in Minnesota, the State of Washington, where 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser was abducted and freed upon payment of $200,000 ransom, provides death by hanging upon conviction of kidnap charges.

Some police officials expressed belief that fear of questioning in the Weyerhaeuser abduction might have influenced Davis' decision to end the Government's case against him so quickly here.

But Federal officials said they were convinced Davis had no connection with the Weyerhaeuser case. They said he was known to have been in the Chicago area, where he was arrested Saturday, the entire week of the West Coast abduction.

Davis pleaded guilty in the same courtroom in which his boyhood schoolmate and later underworld pal, Doc Barker, recently was convicted of the same charge for the Bremer abduction last year. Their associate, Alvin Karpis, Public Enemy No. 1, is still sought in the case and has been mentioned as a suspect in the Tacoma kidnap.

Nabbed in Chicago amid "a little unpleasantness," as J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation at Washington, described it, Davis was brought to Minneapolis in a chartered airplane.

U. S. Planning to Turn Kidnapers Over to State

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

As soon as the Weyerhaeuser kidnapers are captured the Federal Government probably will turn them over to Washington State authorities so that they will be liable to the death penalty. Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan revealed last night.

Keenan, in charge of the criminal division of the Department of Justice, said that a quirk in the national kidnap laws prevents capital punishment in Federal courts of the men who abducted 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, Tacoma lumber heir, and released him unharmed after collecting $200,000 ransom.

The Federal law provides that if a kidnaper releases his victim unhurt, life imprisonment is the maximum sentence he may receive. The newly amended Washington State law provides death for first degree kidnapers, at the discretion of the jury. The State Legislature enacted the new kidnap laws in 1933, repealing the old statute, which provided merely a ten-year prison term.

"So the kidnapers probably will be prosecuted in the State courts," Keenan added. "You will remember that we followed this procedure in the McElroy case in Kansas City."

Jaws Shrink With the Years; Why, Science Wants to Know

Rapid Evolution Cause of Ear Exotoses, Dr. Hrdlicka Finds.

The more man talks the smaller his jaws become. In ancient times when grunts served for conversation, every jaw bone was large enough to accommodate its rightful amount of teeth. Now teeth are often crowded into space much too small for them because jaw bones arent what they used to be. How much of this shrinkage is due to heredity, evolution, malnutrition, or exercise through talking is what the Smithsonian Institution, division of physical anthropology, is trying to find out.

The curator of the division, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, and his assistant, Dr. T. D. Stewart, are inclined to the theory that heredity, evolution and malnutrition combined are responsible for the small jaws we have today.

Dividing Line Sought.

Dr. Stewart pointed out yesterday that it is almost impossible for anthropologists to find out where heredity stops and malnutrition begins. And that is what makes Dr. Hrdlicka's new study on ear exostoses so valuable from the medical as well as from the authropological standpoint.

He is convinced these abnormalities—the curator declared they are not a disease—comprise the one form of physical growth not influenced by malnutrition, degeneration, mechanical or chemical causes. Ear evostoses are brought about entirely by man's rapid evolution.

Results of Dr. Hrdlicka's study were made known yesterday, while the curator himself is in Alaska on an excavation project.

More Frequent in Men.

He has found through examining thousands of skulls over a period of several years that exostoses, bony growths in the auditory canal of the ear, are much more frequent in men than in women; almost always occur in adults, and are more likely to be found among those who take their eating and drinking seriously.

The angle that most interests the curator of physical anthropology at Smithsonian Institution is the evidence of man's growing pains; pains which he believes have produced ear exostoses. The growths have never been found in animals, which helps prove Dr. Hrdlicka's point since "man's progress, especially of the brain and head, has for outstripped that of all the rest of creation."

Swain's Obedient Dive Brings 2 Days in Jail

New York, June 3.—Sometimes it doesn't pay to be literal-minded.

Anyway, that's what Arthur Johnson will advise. He's in jail for two days because of the failing.

Johnson's girl told him to go jump in the river. He did. She watched, and then drove away in her car. He was arrested for disrobing in public.

The sessions of the court will be held in the future in the new United States Supreme Court Building.

The next to last attorney admitted to the court was also on Prettymann's motion. She is Grace Kanode, niece of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and secretary to Chief Justice Wheat of the District Supreme Court.

Voluntary Code Held Workable By Ogden Mills

Democrats Urged to Dig Up 1932 Platform as Guide to Future.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 3.—In the home town of President Roosevelt—"our eminent neighbor"—former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills declared tonight that "voluntary agreements" can "go a long way" in taking the place of NRA.

"The agreements I have in mind," said Mills, regarded as a possible Republican presidential nominee in 1936, "must not be permitted to serve as cloaks for monopolistic practices—and when I say voluntary, I mean voluntary, without any element of constitutional compulsion."

Describing the passing of NRA as assuring a "healthier and sounder" economic life, Mills, addressing the Republican Club of Hyde Township, said:

"Of course, problems remained to be solved. Everyone who insists as I do on unswerving maintenance of the competitive process recognizes that unfair competition is one of them.

Trade Commission.

"But voluntary agreements, worked out through the instrumentality of trade associations, sanctioned by the Federal Trade Commission and supported by public opinion, can go a long way in that direction.

"In so far as minimum wages, maximum hours and decent labor conditions are concerned, the States have ample authority, and we haven't begun to explore the hopeful responsibilities of regional compacts between States in this and many other directions."

He advised that the Administration, which he said "seems puzzled" as to its future course, to "dig out o fthe files the dust-covered document known as the Democratic platform of 1932." He added:

"They will find there sailing directions which will bring our ship to safe harbor and restore prosperity and happiness to the nation without doing violence to the Constitution under which the American people achieved more progress and greater well-being than any other people in the history of mankind.

Sees No General Cuts.

Mills said the Supreme Court's adverse NRA decision would cause general wage reductions. He said the "good sense" of the American business man and public opinion "will see to that." He said that there would be some cutting of artificial prices. Monopolistic practices will be abandoned and competition restored but "given a reasonable opportunity for readjustment, these are blessings, not evils."

The President, said Mills, "yearns for the powers of government such as exist in other countries," but the American people will never confer any grant of power comparable to the "dictatorships that have reduced three-fourths of the people of Europe to slavery."

New York Taxi Kills Man Who Dared Desert

New York, June 3 (U.P.).—A man who had laughed at death in the mysterious stillness of Cheops' tomb and the blazing sun of the Saharah Desert, was accidentally killed last night when he stepped into the path of a speeding automobile.

Frank Zambetty, the driver, was booked on a technical charge of homicide.

Papers in Covington's pockets revealed he had been on relief.

Following his work in Egypt, Covington was made a fellow in the Royal Geographical Society. In 1922 he was convicted of possessing indecent pictures and sentenced to the penitentiary. The court referred to him as a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde personality."

Premier of Hungary Avoids Slander Duel

Budapest, Hungary, June 3 (U.P.).—Seconds tonight peacefully settled the "affair of honor" between Premier Gen. Julius Goemboes and Tibor von Eckhardt, political leader, and a proposed duel was called off.

The premier as an army officer was forced to accept Von Eckhardt's challenge, although as premier he was sworn to enforce the law against dueling. He named his seconds when challenged, however, after conferring with Admiral Nicholas Horthy, the regent, and apparently gaining his approval.

'Self-Crucifixion' Victim Committed to Asylum

High Point, N. C., June 3 (A.P.).—R. J. Riggs, who voluntarily underwent "crucifixion" last Saturday morning in a vain attempt to win back the affections of his estranged wife, was ordered committed to the State Hospital for the Insane at Morganton late today.

The commitment order was signed by Justice of the Peace C. C. Muse upon a statement by Dr. W. J. McAnally, High Point city health officer, that Riggs was in need of mental treatment.

Weak and apparently dazed, the man who lay nailed to a rude cross for more than two hours was transferred from the High Point Jail to the Guilford County Jail at Greensboro to await removal to the institution.

Treasury Shows $3 Billion Deficit In Fiscal Year

Government Has Spent Less Than Roosevelt Predicted.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau checked the Treasury's cash box last night and found $3,133,471,295 in I. O. U.'s stacked up during 11 months of the present financial year.

The Government had spent $6,470,209,136 and had taken in only $3,336,733,840.

The big deficit, however, ran behind President Roosevelt's budget estimate which forecast an excess of expenditures of $4,869,416,338 for the year ending June 30. This would have meant a monthly deficit of $407,000,000. Yesterday capitulation of the Treasury's condition at the end of May, showed a monthly average deficit of $285,000,000.

The gross public debt on May 31 was $28,638,385,223.

The Government's failure to spend as much as forecast in the budget was responsible for holding the deficit below estimates. The budget projected outlays of $8,581,069,026 for all purposes during the 12-month period. This was $2,110,863,890 more than the Treasury spent in 11 months. Expenditures termed "emergency" accounted for $3,229,872,921 of the 11-month outlay.

Receipts were conforming closely to budget estimates, amounting to $3,336,733,840 up to May 31, as against a total of $3,702,279,033 forecast for the year. The remaining month includes the date on which second installments are due on 1934 income taxes—June 15.

Yesterday's condition statement showed the Treasury's cash balance increased more than $300,000,000 by a transfer of check accounts of special agencies. Officials explained that a deposit of about $387,000,000 held by the Treasury, in cash, for postmasters, dispersing officers, and other agencies, had been cut down to $52,035,367 when experience showed there would be no immediate call for such a large expenditure. This bookkeeping transaction provided the boost in cash for general requirements.

Widow of Bonfils Dies Unexpectedly in Denver

Denver, June 3 (AP).—Mrs. Belle Barton Bonfils, widow of Fred G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post, died today after an illness of ten days. Mrs. Bonfils held a controlling interest in the Post, but took no active part in management of the newspaper. Her illness had not been believed serious.

She was born at Peekskill, N. Y., the daughter of David and Mary Barton. She married Mr. Bonfils July 26, 1882, while he was a cadet at West Point. Two daughters, Helen Bonfils and Mrs. May Bonfils Berryman, of Denver, and a sister, Mrs. Marcelle Morelli, of New York, survive.

Cabinet Called To Meet Today On NRA Plan

President Tells Richberg to Keep Organization Intact.

templated steps for the future of NRA before he leaves.

"Personally," Byrns said, "I think it would be better to defer consideration of a constitutional amendment until we see, in the light of the court's decision, what we can do under the Constitution as it now is.

"But the people will never be willing to go back to the old order of things. The flag will still fly, the Capitol will still stand, and the people will be happy and prosperous if you give them time."

Bill Is Prepared.

Chairman Connery, of the House Labor Committee, is preparing to introduce a bill containing the suggestions made by Senator O'Mahoney. He would provide that a licensed business should be required to comply with a 30-hour week, minimum wages, collective bargaining provisions and child labor prohibition.

Meanwhile, Secretary of Labor Perkins planned to meet today with representatives of Northeastern industrial States to discuss interstate compacts for minimum wages, maximum hours and the right of collective bargaining. The discussion will look toward an agreement on uniform State legislation.

This plan also may be discussed when the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, composed of heads of nearly all the important union organizations, meets Thursday. More attention, however, is expected to be given the Wagner labor disputes bill, the 30-hour week bill and the Guffey coal bill. A strike of 450,000 coal miners called for June 17 hinges largely on congressional action on the Guffey bill.

Surprise Action.

Indication that the President's sudden call for conferences of the Cabinet and of congressional leaders came as a surprise even to some of his closest advisers was seen in Richberg's doubt about the future of the NRA organization, relieved only by the President's assurance, which came less than half an hour before the call for the extraordinary meetings.

It is believed that the business advisory group had suggested to the President a system of voluntary agreements to maintain NRA standards. It is thought, however, that the President's plan will go much further. Suggestions similar to that of the Advisory Council group have come from numerous sources during the week since the Supreme Court toppled the Blue Eagle from its perch.

Week of Preparation.

During that week President Roosevelt has devoted nearly all his attention to NRA. He has conferred with scores of persons, with some of them many times, has given his personal attention to letters and telegrams received at the White House, and has generally sounded out public sentiment. From all the millions of written and spoken words of advice and suggestions he is believed to have learned considerable of what the country, especially that part of it represented by business and labor, is thinking and to have reached some definite conclusions.

The calling in of congressional leaders was taken to indicate that a bill might be presented immediately and that a lethargic Congress will be galvanized into action over night.

The only positive reaction to the NRA decision in Congress yesterday was introduction of a resolution in the House by Representative Truax (Democrat), Ohio, to limit terms of Federal judges. This was interpreted as a slap at the Supreme Court. The resolution was shouted down by a vote of 220 to 2. Representative Dunn (Democrat), Pennsylvania, was the only member voting with Truax.

Legislation Delayed.

The effect of the Supreme Court decision on legislation other than that directly affecting NRA was still being studied in Congress. Chairman Smith, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, forecast the writing into law of specific farm processing tax rates as a safeguard against a decision that the present law includes an unwarranted delegation of power. He indicated that he had discussed plans at length with Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator.

Senator Smith predicted that the first draft of revised AAA amendments, sent back to committee after the Supreme Court decision, would be ready for submission to the committee today. They were being prepared by the Agriculture Department.

The committee chairman still insisted that the licensing provisions of the farm act would be dropped, but he added he thought regulations upon the interstate movement of agricultural products would give the Secretary of Agriculture the authority he sought to arrange marketing agreements. He said he thought that in instances in which processing taxes were resulting in higher than "parity" prices they would be lowered in the bill. He said the Secretary of Agriculture might be allowed to move the tax up and down within prescribed limits.

Holds Cotton Loans Safe.

Senator John Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, issued a statement challenging all suggestions that the NRA decision may prevent cotton loans. He pointed out that cotton loans are not made by the AAA, but by the RFC through its subsidiary, the Commodity Credit Corporation.

"There is nothing in the NRA decision," he added, "to create any alarm about anything in the agricultural adjustment act except the licensing provisions and those provisions will be eliminated under the bill amending the AAA."

A. Mitchell Palmer, former Attorney General, in a statement, proposed amendment of the Constitution to modernize the interstate commerce clause.

"The President has shown that this clause is out of date," he said. "It was written for an age that has passed into history. Nobody has ever suggested an amendment to deprive the Congress of the power of legislation. Such a proposed amendment has its only foundation in the imagination of Senator Borah, who suggests it as a purely political reductio ad absurdum."

Court Rejects Maryland Cut In Phone Rates

1935 term. The number of cases on the court's docket in the term just ended totaled 1,040, compared with 1,132 in the previous term and 1,037 in the term which started in October, 1932.

The court disposed of 931 cases during the term, leaving 109 to be carried over until next October. This compares with 1,029 carried over last October and 910 carried over in October, 1932. Of those carried over until next Octber, 13 are original cases and 81 appellate cases waiting to be heard on their merits and 45 petitions for writs of certiorari.

The court yesterday named a group of eminent lawyers, with William D. Mitchell, former Solicitor General and former Attorney General, as chairman, to be an advisory committee to the tribunal in the preparation of a unified system of general rules for cases in equity and actions at law in the Federal district courts to secure one form of civil action and procedure for both classes of cases.

HOLC Case Accepted.

In addition to Mr. Mitchell, those named by the court were Scott M. Loftin, president of the American Bar Association; George W. Wickersham, president of the American Law Institute; Wilbur H. Cherry, profesor of law at the University of Minnesota; Charles E. Clark, dean of the law school of Yale University; Armistead M. Dobie, dean of the law schol of the University of Virginia; Robert G. Dodge, of Boston, Mass.; George Donworth, of Seattle, Wash.; Joseph G. Gamble, of Des Moines, Iowa; Monte M. Lemann, of New Orleans, La.; Edmund M. Morgan, professor of law at Harvard University; Warren Olney, jr., of San Francisco, Calif.; Edson R. Sunderland, professor of law at the University of Michigan, and Edgar B. Tolman, Chicago, Ill.

Charles E. Clark, of New Haven, Con., was named reporter to the advisory committee, which shall have the duty of preparing a draft of the proposed rules for submission to the court.

The court for the second time rejected a petition by the Federal Government to determine the controversy on the question of authority over development of the Hawks Nest Dam, a hydro-electric power development in West Virginia. The Federal Power Commission plans to return to the Federal District Court in West Virginia.

"Red" Petition Rejected.

In its list of orders the court agreed to review aspects of constitutionality of the HOLC act in a case growing out of refusal of the Wisconsin State banking commission to permit building and loan associations with State charters to obtain Federal charters under the HOLC act.

A delegation undertook to present to the court a petition asking a stay of execution and rehearing for Angelo Herndon, Atlanta Negro communist, convicted on charges of inciting an insurrection. The court several weeks ago refused to interfere in the case. The petition was left with a court attache as the group left the Capitol, escorted by police.

In the Baltimore telephone case the Maryland utility commission in November, 1933, ordered a reduction in the company's rates sufficient to diminish its annual net income by $1,000,000. Of this reduction, $850,000 would accrue from reductions in local rates.

The commission took this action after determining value of the company's property to be $32,621,190 as of December 31, 1932, arriving at that conclusion by applying to an appraisal of the company's property made in 1923 a formula based on 16 weighted prices indices, one covering as many as 784 commodities.

The district court, in reviewing the commission's action, rejected this method of arriving at value, but determined the company's property to have a valuation of $39,941,921, taking into consideration the book cost of the property, less the amount of depreciation reserves and adding an allowance for going-value.

Justice Roberts' opinion rejected both methods of arriving at valuation, contending that "to an extent value must be a matter of sound judgment, involving fact data."

"To substitute for such factors as historical cost and cost of reproduction, a 'translator' of dollar value obtained by the use of price trend indices, serves only to confuse the problem and to increase its difficulty, and may well lead to results anything but accurate and fair. This is not to suggest that price trends are to be disregarded. Quite the contrary is true. And evidence of such trends is to be considered with all other relevant factors," the opinion said.

The court pointed out that a defect in the commission's method was illustrated by the shift in prices which took place immediately before and since its decision. Adjustment of the value of utility properties to sudden price fluctuations, it was held, would be "not only unfair, but impractical."

The case is now sent back to the Maryland Public Service Commission for a new determination. Since the case was inaugurated, however, personnel of the commission has been changed as a result of the election of a Republican Governor in Maryland. Harold E. Wets, retiring chairman, against whom the case was filed, was in court to hear the decision. So was Richard F. Cleveland, son of the former President, who defended the commission as its attorney.

Million Allotted For Richmond Job

Housing Project Awaits Roosevelt's Assent.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond's $1,200,000 Federal housing project yesterday awaited presidential approval at the White House, where it was sent with recommendations from the Works Allotment Board.

Details of the project plans, which contemplate construction of Negro housing accommodations, will not be announced until President Roosevelt has given it his approval and the land has been acquired, the allotment board announced.

The board recommended an expenditure of $1,200,000, after the original estimate was fixed at $85,000.

Second Federal Court Post Wins New Endorsement.

By the Associated Press.

The Montague bill to create a second judgeship for the Eastern Federal Court in Virginia yesterday received its second approval by the House.

The bill, providing for a division between two judges of the Eastern District's Federal Court work, was passed by the House and sent to the Senate. An identical bill was passed by the House in the last session of Congress but it was allowed to die in the Senate.

Representative Montague, of Richmond, introduced the bill in both sessions in response to a demand by many lawyers practicing in the court and others, who asserted the court, now presided over by Judge Luther B. Way, was overloaded.

The bill was passed by a standing House vote, and was sent to the Senate to be guided there by Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia.

Deadly Spider's Keeper Is Dead; Mystery Grows

Doctors Believe Drug May Have Taken Life; Victim Silent to Last.

By the Associated Press.

Worcester, Mass., June 3.—Stephen Lisowski, 28, died today without revealing to detectives waiting by his bed why he took an overdose of sleeping tablets and kept a deadly spider in his room.

Discovered unconscious Saturday in his shabby lodging house room, Lisowsky was first thought to be suffering from the poisoning bite of a black widow spider he imported from California.

The finding of several notes indicating an intention to end his life, together with the presence of the spider and the absence of all other poisonous agents or their containers, supported officials in a suicide theory.

Upon learning, however, that a box of sleep-inducing tablets had been removed from his room by a young woman friend, physicians discarded the spider theory tentatively and assumed death due to an overdose of the drug.

Miss Rose Castagnaro, of Westerly, R. I., student nurse at City Hospital, who was mentioned affectionately in one of the notes left by the dead man, told Superintendent of Detectives William P. Finneran that she went to Lisowski's room Saturday and, finding him unconscious, took away a box of the drug she inadvertently had left there a day or two before. Finneran said the young woman told him she had no idea Lisowski contemplated suicide.

Spots were found on Lisowski's chest and hands which could have been inflicted by the spider, Physicians said.

The graduation of Miss Castagnaro, scheduled for September, has been postponed. Dr. George MacIver, superintendent of the hospital, would not say she had been dropped from the hospital staff.

Medical Use Found For Spider's Venom

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—The venom of the black widow spider is good for relieving pain of angina pectoris, the American Institute of Homeopathy was told today by Dr. Linn J. Boyd, of the Homeopathic College and Flower Hospital.

Dr. Boyd's report is in line with recent developments in using snake venoms as a substitute for morphine to ease pain.

Black widow spider venom is about 20 times more powerful than rattlesnake venom. But because the spiders have only a little venom they are not as dangerous as the snakes.

Hot Oil Flow Precluded.

Austin, Tex., June 3 (AP).—Attorney General William McCraw said today the disposition of approximately 3,000,000 barrels of overproduced oil in storage in east Texas seemed assured at a profit to the State of more than $1,000,000. "The price paid for the hot oil so far precludes any portion of it being thrown on the market at cut-throat prices," he assured.

Habitual Drunks Get 90 Days As Judge's Leniency Is Ended

Police Court Jurist Selects 'Examples' From Week-end Offenders.

From now on (and it started yesterday), habitual "drunks" will receive no mercy at the hands of Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

He made this clear by selecting examples from the usual parade of Monday morning offenders, and sentenced three intoxication "repeaters" to pay fines of $100 or spend 90 days in jail.

As one by one the prisoners were arraigned before Judge Schuldt, he scanned their records and those with previous offenses were given maximum sentences.

"The time for leniency in intoxication cases involving persons who have been before the court on other occasions is over," the judge declared. "I do not intend to impose the usual sentences of $10 or ten days in jail. If these persons persist in drinking to excess and wandering about the streets, I am going to put them where they will not be offensive to law-abiding citizens."

In addition to yesterday's "repeaters," a fourth man was sentenced to pay a $100 fine or spend 30 days in jail for shooting dice.

Man Admits Burning School 31 Years Ago

Superior, Wis., June 3 (AP).—A trembling old man shuffled into the district attorney's office today and said he had burned down a frame schoolhouse at Maple, Wis., 31 years ago because of a grudge against the teacher.

He had been going to church lately, the man told Assistant County Prosecutor James McKay, and wanted to confess and take his punishment.

McKay told him the statute of limitations forbade prosecution.

Byrd Anticipates Polar Sanatorium

Explorer Tells Graduates of Healthy Climate.

By the Associated Press.

Mount Pleasant, Iowa, June 3.—Little America, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd said today, may some day become an international health resort.

The commander of the most recent South Pole expedition spoke briefly at the eighty-first commencement exercises of Iowa Wesleyan College and was awarded an honorary doctor of science degree. More than six thousand persons, including State officials, gathered here to hear him.

Commander Byrd said there is virtually no insect life in the Antarctic, eliminating one cause of disease.

Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, a member of the Wesleyan faculty and one of Byrd's crew, also received an honorary degree.

The college conferred an honorary doctor of science degree on the Rev. Edwin Holt Hughes, jr., of Indiana, Pa. Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of Washington, D. C., gave the commencement address.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, June 3 (AP).—Jan Malypetr formed a 16-man cabinet today, succeeding the one headed by him, which resigned after recent general elections.

There are four new ministers in the government, Franz Nachnyk, interior; Josef Cerny, commerce, and Josef Najman and Franz Spina without portfolio.

No representative of the "German Sudenten" Party, which is Nazi, is represented in the cabinet, although the party made sharp gains in the elections.

Preacher Ready For Any Reptile

Hensley Says He's Still Defiant of Snakes.

By the Associated Press.

St. Charles, Va., June 3.—The Rev. George Hensley, snake-handling Holiness preacher, today answered challengers and critics by offering to handle any poison reptile that could be caught in America or anywhere else.

"I have no fear of any poison reptile upon earth," he said, adding that he was not handling snakes for amusement or showmanship, but because he felt he was called upon by God to handle them "as a proof of faith."

Rattlesnakes he picked up at a church service yesterday failed to bite him—or anyone else—but his right arm was still sore from the bite of a copperhead although improved. Fingers on the hand could be moved, but the thumb, where the snake's fangs entered, was very dark and swollen.

Court Denies Appeal Of Expectant Mother

Berlin, June 3 (AP).—A 24-year-old expectant mother, convicted of the murder of her three children, must die upon the Nazi chopping block under a supreme court decision today.

The court rejected the appeal of Frau Charlotte Juenemann, who admitted wasting her money upon night life, liquor and cigarettes and leaving the children to starve in a cold basement apartment.

Her defense that she did not premeditate the deaths was not accepted by the high court, and unless Adolf Hitler steps in the bobbed-haired mother must be beheaded.

Action Depends However on Success of Talks in London.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 3.—Great Britain offered today, well-informed quarters said, to seek Germany's admission by other powers, including the United States, to the world naval conference.

This step marked the opening of the first naval negotiations the Reich has undertaken with any nation since the prewar attempts of the Asquith government to halt Anglo-German building competition.

England's offer was made by Premier Ramsay MacDonald and Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, in a private meeting with Joachim von Ribbentrop, Adolf Hitler's blond 40-year-old ambassador extraordinary.

British Demands.

Expiring naval treaties require the calling of a new conference of the signatory powers—Britain, the United States, Japan, France and Italy—but it was understood London is willing to sponsor an invitation for Germany if the present talks are successful.

From the British viewpoint these can succeed only if Berlin will accept definite limitations on all categories of ship for the new Nazi navy—something her delegates were reported to be determined to oppose.

The usually jovial Von Ribbentrop was grim and serious as he made his first contacts with British statesmen this afternoon, including Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty.

A spokesman for the German delegation declared "there are many difficulties in the way of Germany's participation in a naval conference."

Hitler Adamant.

The talks will begin officially tomorrow.

Diplomatic circles understood Germany regards her offer to restrict her tonnage to 35 per cent of Britain's strength as the only restriction she can accept and that the distribution of her tonnage is for her alone to decide.

Reports that Great Britain will send a formal note to Germany expressing the view Locarno Treaty obligations can not be affected by the more recent Franco-Soviet defensive pact circulated in London.

It was understood, however, that Adolf Hitler's apprehensions on this point, expressed in his recent Reichstag speech, already have been appeased by diplomatic exchanges.

Oppositionists Demand New Slav Elections

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, June 3 (AP).—While the newly elected Parliament opened at Belgrade, 44 opposition members gathered today and issued a warning that "further existence of Yugoslavia is possible only if new and fair elections are held."

The 44 representatives, mostly from Croat and Slovene districts, refused to take their seats in Parliament, from which they charged many of their fellow campaigners had been excluded by the "government's fraudulent vote count."

Belgrade, June 3 (AP).—Yugoslavia's new Parliament convened today as authorities, fearing possible student disorders, closed the University of Belgrade for the day. The country was reported quiet.

Ovation in N. Y. For Normandie At End of Trip

quarantine and steamed up the bay They ranged from a picturesque, four-masted schooner to a rowboat.

They made so much smoke that plans to send Secretary Hull's official greeting to the ship by a light beam from the Statue of Liberty were abandoned. The Secretary's message was broadcast.

Planes, including amphibians and huge transports, droned overhead. Trailing from one was a banner bearing the letters: "New York Welcomes the Normandie."

Leviathan Silent.

From a tug floated a huge balloon in the form of Mickey Mouse. Next to the Normandie this dominated the harbor scene.

Shortly after the Normandie arrived in the Narrows the symphony of the waterfront began. It continued until she was warped into her pier, ships of all descriptions whistling in greeting.

The once-mighty Leviathan, of course, was silent as the Normandie glided past. The retired flagship of the American Merchant Marine, once the largest and most palatial of ocean greyhounds, is rusting at her pier. From the sun deck of the new Normandie she looked small and obsolete.

Wall Street's usual manifestation of enthusiasm—storms of ticker tape—could be clearly seen against the backdrop of the skyscrapers as the ship passed the Battery. It was a hard day on the telephone company's directories.

It required 50 minutes to warp the liner into her new pier, and in the process, as several tugs were nibbling at her huge sides, a long strip of paint was scraped off when she bumped against the pier.

Vandenberg Ridicules Talk About Coalition

Senators Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Austin (Republican), Vermont, denied yesterday they had participated last week in a conference with former Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, and other Republicans, on the formation of a coalition to fight the New Deal.

Published reports said the Republican leaders discussed a coalition using the Democratic platform of 1932 as a basis for organization. Vandenberg and Austin said the dinner, at the home of Senator White (Republican), Maine, was purely social, and that they did not remember politics even being discussed.

Vandenberg termed the reports of a coalition move "ridiculous."

The campaign is being conducted by a Cambridge weekly newspaper. Among the donations received was one of $1 from W. E. Warren, president of the Big Horn County Bank of Hardin, Mont. A $5 contribution came from H. W. Symonds, president of a cash register company in St. Louis, Mo.

More Tremors Jolt Quake-Torn India

New Shocks Spread Fear Among Survivors.

By the United Press.

Quetta, British Baluchistan, India, June 3.—Minor shocks spread terror through this earthquake-shattered region on the northwestern frontier today, adding to the difficulties facing rescue workers seeking further victims in the debris of last Friday's disaster.

The latest estimate gave 40,000 dead, including those still buried in the debris in and around Quetta, and 6,000 injured.

By the United Press.

London, June 3.—The India office issued a communique tonight putting the dead in the Quetta earthquake at 26,000. It was estimated that fully 20,000 of the corpses still are buried in the debris.

Bodies of 5,000 natives have been recovered. They were immediately buried again, or burned.

The report estimated that 70 per cent of the population was killed or injured. Six thousand British and 30,000 Indians, including troops, are being fed through relief measures.

Rebel Charge Dropped Against Cuban Women

By the Associated Press.

Matanzas, Cuba, June 3.—A judge advocate withdrew today all charges against two women, Ziomara O'Halloran and Concepcion Valdivieso de Giraud, on trial before a council of war with followers of the slain radical leader, Antonio Guiteras.

The Honduran counsel, Emilio Pinel, also was freed of charges of being armed and ready to fire on troops in the battle in which Guiteras, a former cabinet minister, was slain.

Ziomara O'Halloran and the consul were released, but Concepcion Valdivieso de Giraud was held in connection with the recent Fallet Bonet kidnaping.

lins, mother of John Patrick, feared it was bad news.

"My married daughter is out in Chicago," she said, "and I thought she might be sick. I took it up to John, who was in bed. He opened it and let out a shout. Then he almost fell out of the bed."

But yesterday John Patrick Collins had both feet on the ground. He was on the job as usual, moving among the huge locomotives in the railroad yards.

"I am sitting tight," he said, "and I won't start making plans till I've got the money."

Mrs. Voght Bought Ticket.

The history of the sweepstakes lottery is filled with tragic stories—stories of winners who have made fools of themselves, of families that have been disrupted. But no such story is likely to be told about Mr. and Mrs. Max Voght.

"Why ask me about this?" Voght said last night. "Mrs. Voght bought the ticket. It's hers."

But Mrs. Voght insisted that she bought it for her husband and that it was in his name.

"What will we do if we win" said Voght. "We'll stay right here in the old shack, I guess. Would I continue to work? Yes, sir. I've got to do something to stay out of mischief."

Collins drew a horse called Maltravis, a long shot. Voght drew Spanner, another long shot.

By the Associated Press.

Dublin, Irish Free State, June 3.—American ticket holders were assured approximately $1,318,930 in the Irish Free State Hospital Sweepstakes on the Epsom Derby today as the draw was ended.

The New York Post estimated that more than 3,000,000 Americans participated in this sweepstakes and that the various foreign sweepstakes bring a profit of $7,000,000 annually from the American sale.

A grand total of 386 horses, seven residual prizes and 457 consolation ones were drawn for Americans from the drum of fortune. In addition to the assured value of the horse tickets, there will be £30,000 (about $150,000), £15,000 and £10,000, respectively, for the first three horses in Wednesday's Epsom Derby, and there are 11 of these units to be distributed.

Americans today won about $440,900, obtaining 457 of the 1,100 consolation prizes and the seven residual prizes.

New Death Puts D. C. Auto Toll At 49 for Year

Youth Latest Victim; Jury Told Bend in Klingle Rd. Is Death Trap.

A coroner's jury investigating the death of Miss Anna B. Waldron, 67, of 2829 Twenty-eighth street northwest, who succumbed Sunday to injuries received in a collision May 9, heard scathing denunciations of a "death trap" on Klingle road near Courtland place northwest.

It was there, the jury was told, that Miss Waldron was injured fatally while riding with her nephew, Harold W. Lowrie, 51, of 3102 Thirty-second place northwest. Lowrie was exonerated. It was testified he swerved his car on a down grade to avoid collision with another vehicle and struck a tree. Miss Waldron was thrown beneath the dashboard. The other car did not stop.

Sleuth Charges "Hazard."

Detective Sergt. William Liverman, traffic investigator of the homicide squad, denounced the accident scene as a "treacherous traffic hazard." He said Klingle road becomes a steep grade near Courtland place, with a sharp bend at the bottom. He reported that motorists traveling uphill often "speed up and enter the right of way of down-grade traffic."

Yesterday's traffic victim was Ernest Johnson, colored, 28, of the 1100 block of Fourth street northwest. An automobile in which he was riding overturned after collision with the auto of a hit-run driver at Ninth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Two other persons injured slightly in the crash were treated at Freedmen's Hospital. They are Leomonia Fowler, 25, of the 1400 block of New Jersey avenue northwest, and Margaret Johnson, also of the Fourth street address.

Another Hit-Run Victim.

A second hit-and-run driver was sought by police after his car struck a 71-year-old woman at Eighteenth and G streets northwest. Witnesses said the auto was traveling the wrong way on G street, a one-way thoroughfare. The injured woman is Mrs. Mary Young, of 1813 F street northwest. She is at Emergency Hospital, with a fracture of the arm and internal hurts.

Two youths are recovering in Emergency Hospital from injuries received in a crash which took the life of a third near McLean, Va., Sunday. Thomas Allen, 16, of 1205 K street northwest, suffered severe cuts and lacerations. James Morris, 20, of 3317 Dent place northwest, received fractures of the ribs, a dislocated shoulder and lacerations. The dead youth was Cecil Landis, 18, also of the Dent place address.

At the end of 1934 there was outstanding $4,800,000 of the bonds. Before the call date the company stated it would offer holders a new issue at a lower coupon rate.

U. S. Acts to Smash N.Y. Fish Monopoly

Violence Charged in Maintenance of Combine.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—The Government today launched a court fight to smash a $5,000,000 monopoly it accused eight corporations and 19 individuals of maintaining by violence in the handling of fresh-water fish in the metropolitan area.

Forty-three defendants pleaded guilty.

Assistant United States Attorney John Harlem Amen charged the Fish Workers Union of Greater New York, one of the defendants, with slashing tires, throwing "stink bombs," and with other assaults to defeat competition and control prices.

Many wholesale houses have been forced to close, Amen said.

The defendants, Amen declared, did an annual business of $5,000,000, handling fish in large quantities from Midwestern States, New York and parts of Canada.

Encephalitis Kills Girl.

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—Shirley Strattan, 11, who developed encephalitis, or sleeping sickness, while recovering from measles last week, died today in suburban Evanston Hospital after 36 hours in the "iron lung," a respirator. Shirley was placed in the respirator late Friday in the hope that forced breathing would help her.

Bill Widening Farms Credit Becomes Law

Measure Opens Way for Purchase of Lands by Tenants.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the farm credit act of 1935 and Administration officials immediately hailed it as offering an opportunity for many tenants to buy their own farms.

After approval of the new law, extending and modifying loan provisions of the farm credit administration, Gov. William I. Myers announced reductions in loan interest rates.

"The new act should enable many tenants to purchase farms of their own," Gov. Myers said. "One reason why farm tenancy had increased so steadily in the United States during the past 20 years is because it has been so difficult for young farmers and tenants in many sections to finance the purchase of farms on reasonable terms.

"The new provision enabling the land bank commissioner to make loans for the purpose of purchasing farms provides a new opportunity for young farmers and tenants to become farm owners and home owners in their own right."

The new act extends until January 1, 1940, the time during which the land bank commissioner may make direct loans to farmers on first or second mortgages. Not more than $7,500 may be loaned to one farmer, and the amount of the commissioner's loan plus existing debts may not exceed 75 per cent of the appraised normal value of the farm.

Interest Reductions.

Under the amended law, loans can be made to finance purchase of farms. Formerly, land bank commissioner loans could be obtained only to refinance debts, to repurchas farms lost through foreclosure and to use as working capital.

Myers said interest charges on all Federal Lanw Bank loans through national farm loan associations will be reduced to 3½ per cent for interest payable in the one-year period beginning July 1, 1935, and to 4 per cent for all interest payable in the two-year period beginning July 1, 1936. Interest rates on loans made directly by the land banks will be reduced to 4 and 4½ per cent, respectively, for these periods.

The interest rate on land bank commissioner loans will remain unchanged at 5 per cent.

The second annual report of the FCA yesterday said that from May 1, 1933, through December 31, 1934, loans advanced totaled $2,379,063,000.

Crisis Overemphasized, Cummings Declares

Harrogate, Tenn., June 3 (AP).—United States Attorney General Homer Cummings, addressing the graduating class of Lincoln Memorial University, said today that "we talk too much about being in the midst of a crisis."

After advising the student not to be "disheartened or misled by all this talk about revolutionary transitions, chaos, crisis and collapse," he said that "every era is one of crisis and transition, just as every era is and ever has been one of change."

"When you no longer change you are dead," he declared. "The same is true of nations."

House Passes Commodities' Trading Curb

speculative trades and commitments. Hedging transactions are exempted.

Futures commission merchants and floor brokers are required to register with the Secretary of Agriculture, and this registration may be revoked for violations of the act. Penalties are provided for sharp practices.

Could Limit Trading.

When the Commodities Exchange Commission found excessive speculation in any commodity caused "an undue and unnecessary burden on interstate commerce," after due notice and hearings it could establish limits on futures trading on contract markets that could be done by one person in one day. It could fix the net "long" and net "short" position of any person in futures trades.

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the Agriculture Committee, reported to the House that since passage of the securities exchange act of 1934 there has been "an increasing tendency on the part of professional speculators to transfer their activities from the security markets to the commodity markets."

Although the President has never formally indorsed the bill, Jones cited to the House several statements by Mr. Roosevelt in favor of Federal regulation of commodity trading.

Break in Prices Cited.

"The break in cotton futures prices of nearly 200 points on March 11, with no satisfactory explanation and no ready means by which any agency of the Government could ascertain the true facts, furnishes a recent demonstration of the need for regulation of the cotton futures exchanges," said Jones.

Representative Beam, in his dissenting committee report, insisted the exchanges already are under what is tantamount to a license system, under the grain futures act.

The word "registration" in the bill, he said, is a misnomer for "license," imposing "exactly the same legal incidents and hazards."

Such a system of "registration" or "license," Beam said, "would undermine the discipline now exercised by the commodity exchanges through their business-conduct rules and committees, without providing a satisfactory substitute."

Exchanges Take Same View.

Representatives of the exchanges have taken a similar position, warning that a greatly restricted farmers' market may result from the measure.

The bill has undergone no revision since the Supreme Court's recent NRA decision, but Chairman Jones argued that careful attention was given to Constitutional phases.

"It is believed that the standards for administrative action contained in the grain futures act," Jones reported, "and the standards inserted in the new provisions proposed to be added by the bill are adequate to furnish definite and reasonable guides to administrative officers so that the proposed legislation will not suffer from Constitutional infirmity of invalid delegation of legislative power."

Besides wheat and cotton, commodities brought within the measure's regulatory scope are rice, corn, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed, grain sorghums, mill feeds, butter and eggs.

Deals With Other Commodities.

The bill provides that a board of trade may be treated as a "contract market," if only one of the commodities covered in the bill are traded in on the board.

Fictitious sales, or transactions known in the trade as "wash sales," "cross trades," "accommodation trades," etc., are made unlawful. The bill also strikes at any attempt to defraud or deceive a customer, or to "bucket" an order.

The grain futures act of 1922, to which the measure was appended, was designed primarily to deal with futures trading in grains. The bill passed yesterday was designed on the theory that the same principles apply to futures trading in other commodities.

England's King, On Reaching 70, Rides in Parade

Monarch Spends 1½ Hrs. on Horseback During Trooping of Colors.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 3.—King George spent an hour and a half on horseback on his seventieth birthday today at a military display in his honor, although he had remained indoor over the week-end because of a slight illness.

A round of official dinner parties were held tonight, including parties by members of the government in the houses of Lords and Commons, and another by the Earl of Granard, the King's master of the horse.

Flanked by his four sons, the monarch rode a bay horse at the head of a column of cavalry and infantry in the historic ceremony of trooping the colors.

Dressed in the scarlet and gold uniform of colonel in chief of the Irish Guards, he saluted right and left as he rode between Buckingham Palace and the Horse Guards parade. All four sons—the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent—participated with their father for the first time.

Military attaches of foreign countries, including three from the United States, and two Indian princes accompanied the King.

Queen Mary drove in an open carriage to the parade, accompanied by the Duchesses of York and Kent and her little granddaughters, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose.

Celebrations of the King's birthday were held throughout the empire. Servants of the royal household drank a toast to him at noon in champagne. Hundreds of messages of congratulation and presents flowed into the palace.

Princess Royal Faces Glandular Operation

London, June 3 (AP).—The Princess Royal—the Countess of Harewood—will undergo a thyroid gland operation, a physicians' bulletin announced tonight.

"The Princess Royal for some time has been suffering from exophtalmic goiter. Although the health of her royal highness has improved under medical treatment, a complete cure is not being effected thereby," the bulletin said. "It has therefore been decided to treat the thyroid gland by operation."

The princess is the only daughter of the king and queen. Although she lunched yesterday at Buckingham Palace, she did not attend the ceremony of the trooping of the colors today with other members of the royal family and there were reports she was ill in a nursing home.

On Friday night at the like hour, a song recital will be given by Margaret Harmes, of Binghampton, N. Y., who is being graduated from the junior college. Her program is announced as follows:

"Mattinata" (Tosti), "Twenty-Eighteen" (Taylor), "Senenade" (Schubert), aria from "Herodiade" (Massenet), "Serenity" (Salter), "Ave Maria" (Kahn), "You Will Forget" (Stickles), "A Spirit Flower" (Campbell-Tipton), "The Night Wind" (Farley), "Tell Me, O Blue Sky" (Giannini).

Hitler's Austrian Legion On Mysterious Journey

Munich, June 3 (AP).—Unusual and mysterious activities were detected tonight in the Austrian Legion, which Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler once designated to carry the Nazi gospel to Austria.

Ten lorries, filled with happy and cheering legionnaires, rolled southward from Munich in the direction of Innsbruck, 62 miles distant, but all were silent as to their objective.

Clad in new uniforms, the legionnaires—friendless since the coup d'etat which resulted in the death of the Austrian Chancellor Engelburt Dollfus—appeared happier than they had for a long time.

The message said Robertson died unexpectedly. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson were on a summer cruise. They left Cleveland two weeks ago.

Robertson, born in North Bloomfield, Ohio, was an alumnus of Harvard University. He was an instructor in chemistry at Harvard for a year. He joined the Plain Dealer staff in 1900 as a reporter and had been an editorial writer and associate editor since 1907.

Havoc Caused by Raging Flood in Nebraska

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The turbulent Republican River in Nebraska piled this house on a railroad trestle outside McCook yesterday. Hundreds were left homeless in the flood.

Floods Race Each Other.

S. D. Flora, Federal meteorologist at Topeka, expected no serious overflow in the Kaw Valley, however; at least he said, nothing so serious as in 1903, when Topeka and Manhattan were flooded. He said the Blue River flood waters should be out of the way by the time the Republican River high water went down.

The two flood victims were Forrest Grooms, 37, of near Clifton, whose overturned boat was found after he set out on a rescue mission, and Perry Wilson, of Smith Center, washed into the stream when a wall of water caused an embankment to collapse.

Many bridges were washed out or damaged. One span of the Scandia Bridge was all that remained standing today. Bridges at Republic City and Sherdahl were washed away.

United States Army troops from Fort Riley aided in flood preparations here, helped keep driftwood from bridges and stood by for possible rescue work.

U. S. Expert Views Floods as Helpful

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., June 3.—Valuable crops were washed away today by muddy flood waters in Kansas, but agricultural experts saw a counterbalancing benefit in sub-soil moisture.

F. K. Reed, Federal agricultural statistician, said many points were receiving the first adequate "water-soaking" in four years.

"It's easy to exaggerate the amount of damages to crops from excessive moisture," he emphasized.

"While it's unfavorable, we are going to have plenty of moisture in the soil and this will help corn greatly. With normal growing weather from now on, Kansas still may produce an excellent corn crop."

Wheat and oats, with harvest less than a month away, stand to suffer the worst loss from the wet weather, Reed said, but they are planted almost entirely on high ground.

Corn, sorghums and other crops, usually found in the lowlands, still may be replanted in time to reach maturity.

Torrential Rains Kill 122 Mexicans

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, June 3.—At least 122 persons were reported officially to have drowned today after torrential rainstorms had swept a number of mountainside towns in the Valley of Mexico.

The police delegate in Xochimilco, a town situated on a network of canals 12 miles from the capital, informed headquarters here that up to 8 o'clock tonight 100 bodies had been recovered in the neighboring village of San Pedro and 22 in San Gregorio.

The delegate said the rains started at 2:30 p. m. and that within two hours roads and fields were flooded. Torrents of water swept down the mountainside, carrying residents of the villages and their homes down into the valley.

serted. "The United States is among our best customers and therefore we are most anxious for friendliest relations."

American authorities said omission of the unconditional most-favored-nation clause, by which two nations agree that if they give special concession to one country they do so to all, was "understandable in making the most of a bad situation."

They added that Germany is pressing for tariff reductions, but "we are not interested because they are offering no concessions and no inducements—only the desire to help themselves by selling finished goods and buying raw products which we ourselves would like to do.

"If we acceded to Germany's request, we would be adding to our own unemployment. Germany has nothing to sell which we are very anxious to get."

Both Germans and Americans agreed that the result probably would be a price war, with goods of each nation subject to tariff maneuvers by the other.

Caillaux Urges Powers Agree To Stabilization

Financial Housecleaning Is On in France; Strikes Vex Bouisson.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 3.—The 72-year-old Joseph Caillaux, starting a financial house cleaning, today urged early stabilization of the franc, the dollar and the pound as an important factor in restoring confidence and reviving business.

Shortly after taking over the duties of finance minister in the new government, Caillaux spiked reports he was planning to call an international monetary conference, explaining that while he has long advocated stabilization it was not for him to take the initiative.

The cabinet of Fernand Bouisson encountered its first strike when employes of the national printing office walked out, protesting a pay cut. A threatened strike by shopkeepers, however, was averted when government leaders promised to bend every effort to reduce taxes and improve economic conditions.

The government vigorously opposed devaluation which the Chamber of Deputies appeared to reject in overthrowing the Flandin cabinet last week, but devaluationists said the issue would certainly be raised again in connection with stabilization.

France has been spurred by the recent financial and political crisis in her desire to secure world money adjustment.

President Lebrun at the dedication of the Normandie and again yesterday at Reims expressed such a wish, and a ministerial declaration tomorrow, Caillaux said, would pledge an effort to stabilize.

"All other nations," the new minister declared, "have an interest in seeing this policy, which would guarantee internal and international peace, succeed. The recovery of trade is the foremost of my preoccupations. It will be particularly facilitated if great currencies other than the franc can become the object some day soon of stabilization, decided upon together."

Switzerland Warns Gold Speculators

By the Associated Press.

Berne, Switzerland, June 3.—Speculators were warned tonight by Hermann Schufelbach, president of the Federal Chambers at the opening of the Parliament's summer session, of Switzerland's determination to keep her franc solidly on gold.

The chamber's president asserted that both sides in the referendum yesterday on a Socialist five-year recovery program which was defeated appealed to the people to protect the Swiss money.

"That permits the affirmation with absolute certainty that the great majority of the Swiss people are resolved to remain faithful to our gold money and are decided to support authorities energetically for defense of the Swiss franc by all means," he said.

"Speculators will do well to take account of this resolution."

colonies, including two native divisions raised there and 10,000 Italian troops which already were on duty in Africa. Another army division and another black shirt division of 32,000 men will be mobilized later.

267,000 Men Involved.

The number of speical workmen and soldiers who have left Italy since February totals 76,768. Including the 1913 naval class of 20,000 being kept under arms for Red Sea and transport service, a grand total of 267,000 men—workmen and soldiers—is involved in the African program.

In its charges against England the Giornale d'Italia quoted Lieut. Col. Clifford of the British army and a member of the Anglo-Ethiopian Commission delimiting the British Somaliland frontier as saying Haile Selassie had asked London to place Ethiopia under Britain's protection for 25 years.

Within the last few days, it asserted, 100 motor trucks of American make, but manufactured in England were shipped into Ethiopia, through Berbera, British Somaliland.

Coordination Might Help.

A wide gulf, so far as technique is concerned, separates the street car rerouting order of the Public Utilities Commission from the so-called negligent homicide bill which seems to be progressing toward enactment by Congress. In one case, the P. U. C. is attempting to bring about more adequate transportation service. In the other, officials are trying to facilitate the punishment of motorists who negligently cause the death of innocent victims. Yet in a larger sense the two measures are closely related. Both represent the community's efforts to deal effectively with a serious traffic problem.

The great diversity of measures sponsored by agencies controlling different phases of transportation in the District suggests the futility of seeking a panacea. Traffic in a modern city raises not one but a dozen or more problems. It involves the adequacy and efficiency of public transportation, the construction and maintenance of streets, the design and mechanical efficiency of automobiles and other vehicles, the procedure of the courts, the punishment of traffic rule violators, etc. But in spite of these ramifications, the necessity of studying the whole problem from a panoramic viewpoint is readily apparent.

Justified criticism is directed at the Government for concentrating a number of enormous Federal buildings in a small area without adequate consideration of traffic movements. Regardless of how active the P. U. C. may be, its efforts may be frustrated, in some respects, by careless city planning. Likewise, Corporation Counsel Prettyman's endeavor to make reckless drivers feel the consequences of their negligence may be nullified by indifference on the part of Congress, the courts or the police.

It is impossible to study the traffic problem in its broader aspects without being struck by the cross-currents of policy and the general lack of coordinated effort. Perhaps it would not be practical to set up a coordinator of transportation in the District. But there is undoubtedly a field within which existing agencies charged with the responsibility of planning and regulating means of conveyance, with the making of rules and enforcement of the law, might pool their experience to the advantage of the public. The number of motor fatalities and the increasing congestion of traffic during the rush hours are ample evidence that patchwork by uncoordinated effort, however desirable each individual measure may be, will not bring about the desired result.

What Price Peace?

"We must be realistic," said Senator Nye in New York last week. These words, spoken before a "Keep America Out of War" mass meeting, are important for their indication that more than generalization and sentimentality is being applied to the problem of assuring American neutrality in the event of another war.

The chairman of the Senate Munitions Investigation Committee, seconded by his colleague, Senator Clark, and by Representative Maverick, devoted his address to an emphasis of the economic as separated from the political aspects of war and peace. Not idealistic resolves but only planned controls of commerce and finance will keep the United States out of the next war—if anything will—the North Dakotan declared.

Putting these preachments into practice, the two Senators have recently introduced resolutions into the Senate which would set up these controls in behalf of neutrality. One would forbid the export of arms and munitions to any belligerent or its agent in time of war. The embargo would become effective automatically on declaration of war. Moreover, the resolution authorizes the President to include in the embargo "any other article or articles which the United States declares to be war material." A second resolution would prohibit all loans and credits to belligerents. A third would empower the President to withhold passports from Americans traveling in war zones or upon vessels of belligerent nations and warn citizens risking their lives in war trade that they must not expect American protection any more than may those who join foreign armies.

These are direct and, in line with Senator Nye's statement, realistic approaches to the problem. The concentration of each resolution on a single subject means that each may receive consideration on its separate merits when presented to Congress. Taken together they represent a well-rounded plan of action to promote the Nation's undoubted desire for complete peace. The only question is whether the Nation would be willing to pay the price. Could it stand firm against the shock of suddenly disengaging the gears of its economy in behalf of an isolation which is easier to preach than to practice?

Senator Borah On Democracy.

It was an interesting coincidence which brought Senator Borah on the air in defense of the Supreme Court on the same day that the Swiss electorate voted to reject a "New Deal" amendment to their constitution.

Switzerland, like the United States, is a federation in which the powers of the central government are carefully limited. It is one of several such nations which President Roosevelt appeared to overlook when he intimated last week that our country is the only one in which the authority of the National Capital is severely restrained by law. The chief difference is that in Switzerland, as a very small nation, there would seem to be far more practical argument for centralization of power than in our own far-flung continental territory.

The Swiss, however, have for centuries been fervent believers in democracy. They fully realize the vital truth which Senator Borah pointed out—that "to leave the question of the extent of power to the determination of those exercising power" is "to strike at the life of a representative democracy." And before their organic law is altered they want to know just what is happening.

Since 1914 Switzerland has stood as a rock of stability in the midst of a weltering sea of European political and economic change. Naturally her people have suffered intensely from the depression, particularly because of their dependence on international trade. But in their national emergency there has been no thought of extra-constitutional remedies, of such fundamentally dishonest "interpretations" as some seem to want our Supreme Court to make. When measures very similar to those launched by the Roosevelt Administration were demanded in Switzerland, a constitutional amendment to make them legal was first drafted. On Sunday, in a nation-wide plebiscite, 84 per cent of the electorate voted on this amendment, rejecting it by a vote of 566,000 to 426,000.

Senator Borah drew no comparisons with little Switzerland in his speech on Sunday night. But he might well have done so. For the Swiss, as a matter of course, acted upon the principle which the senior Senator from Idaho found it necessary to advance to his countrymen in the following ringing phrases:

> The only thing I shall urge is that in the matter of the change the people be consulted. The Constitution should not be changed by the Supreme Court. It should not be changed in Washington. It should be changed by the people alone.

There would be something wrong, either with the democratic faith or the reasoning powers of the American people, if it were necessary to emphasize the unquestionable wisdom of Mr. Borah's thesis. A nation may choose between a government operated at the discretion of its rulers, or operated under laws approved by and changeable only through the will of its people. The former is a dictatorship; the latter a democracy.

Faced with the choice in this alternative, it ought to be obvious to everyone that the Supreme Court has only followed its solemn mandate to preserve democracy for the United States.

The Court Does Move.

At any rate, no one can say that there is anything smacking of the horse and buggy about the new building of the Supreme Court. Although the ten million dollars' worth of marble is carved along classical lines, the dignified simplicity of the new edifice is altogether modern in spirit, particularly when contrasted with the frill-and-furbelow designs fancied by Federal architects of an earlier era.

It is generally understood, however, that the Justices are not a little loath to leave their dim quarters in the Capitol. Certain of them have as much as refused to use the commodious offices provided in the new building, preferring to continue to work in their home studies as heretofore.

Perhaps this does belie their progressiveness. Perhaps they are, after all, a bit set in their ways. Or perhaps it is simply that they have become attached to the well-creased comfort of their high-backed chairs and the musty quaintness of the Capitol chambers. Or, again, it may be they feel they will lose the common touch by going without the little pageant of filing across the corridor through the throngs of tourists while on their stately way to convene the Court. Or, finally, it may be they think the best interests of the Nation will be served by keeping in the closest possible touch with the doings of Congress.

Whatever their reasoning (never lightly to be dismissed), there is one thing that ought to reassure them: they will be considerably nearer the Constitution in their new building—by several hundred yards, we should judge.

Three Days And 23 Hours.

Of all the superlative attributes and appurtenances of the Normandie, whether its winchless decks or stream-lined hull, its dog promenade or its 23-acre kitchens, the one that will most provoke the envious applause of the maritime world is a blue ribbon. As a matter of fact, the officers of the new French leviathan will never be able to show it off to visitors, because it does not actually exist. But the claim to it does, for it belongs to the ship setting the fastest time on a transatlantic run.

Held by the British, the Italians, the Germans and, in earlier and saltier days, by the Americans, that coveted honor now goes to France. To win it, she has spent millions in the midst of depression days to build the largest liner in the world. It is highly doubtful whether the floating palace ever can be made to pay for itself. The consensus of experts is that it will operate only at a loss.

But to the French, that nation of Bergeracs, the mundane bookkeepers' choice of ink will be quite beside the point. Mesdames et messieurs, c'est la gloire!

The Forty-Hour Week.

The international labor conference which convenes in Geneva today will be presented with a resolution drafted by the International Labor Office asking approval in principle of the 40-hour week as the general international standard of hours of work. In view of the campaign being waged in this country by the American Federation of Labor to force a 30-hour week upon industry without sacrifice of pay on the part of workers, attention should be called to the much more modest demands of an organization which is devoted to improving the lot of labor in all parts of the world.

To the I. L. O. the 40-hour week, which has already found widespread acceptance in the United States, is regarded as an ideal to be approached gradually. Plans for its introduction in five basic industries have been outlined and methods suggested for facilitating acceptance of these proposals by direct negotiations between employers and workers in the various countries. It is to be noted, also, that the I. L. O. recognizes the necessity of allowing exceptions to general rules governing working hours—even on the 40-hour week basis.

The impracticability of a universal 30-hour week for American industry and its prohibitive cost have already been demonstrated by informed critics of this half-baked proposal. However, the tentative efforts of the I. L. O. to secure acceptance in principle of a working week of 40 hours as an international standard suggest another objection to the 30-hour week. That is the severe handicap which it would entail for American industries in competition with those of countries in which working hours are so much longer.

While the United States can not accept the standards of nations that permit men and women to labor intolerably long hours, it can not in reason insist upon an extreme reduction of working time under conditions that spell a rapid increase in per unit production costs. To do so would mean eventual lowering of American living standards through reductions in output and progressive weakening of the competitive position of American industries manufacturing for export markets.

For Services Rendered.

To the little man who said that he had "no grandiose ideas about the scientific importance" of the event at which he officiated just over a year ago, has been awarded the Order of the British Empire. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe not only has supervision over five of the most famous of the King's wards, but is himself now a recipient of the coveted order. For on the list of His Majesty's birthday honors appears the name of a gentle, unassuming country doctor, who is cited for "devoted public services as a practicing physician in Canada."

For a quarter of a century, this backwoods physician has tended the sick, the dying and the newly-born over a thinly-settled area of about 400 square miles. In spite of this unflagging devotion to the duties of his calling, it is doubtful if King George V of England would ever have heard of Dr. Dafoe if it had not been for the unusual Dionne case. Therefore, while the citation is probably a direct result of this one feat, the award should be construed as recognition of the faithfulness of every rural practitioner who goes his rounds cheerfully in all kinds of weather, often without pay, and frequently minus necessary medical facilities.

It is certain that no personage on this notable list of the King will wear his honors with more dignity and less arrogance than Dr. Dafoe. The leviathan proportions of New York City failed to dazzle him and regarding his much-tooted private interview with the President of the United States, he said simply that "we talked about babies." Addition of the initials O. B. E. after his name is indeed an honor for the quiet little country doctor, but the world may be sure that they will be assumed with no more self-importance than those of M. D. which he has so honorably borne for more than 25 years.

Perhaps we're making the world safer for future generations, but we certainly are spending a lot of their money doing it.

It's much easier to hold a prejudiced view than it is to learn enough about a subject to form an honest opinion.

No Credit To Lead This List.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

It has been customary to account for the high comparative childbirth death rate in the United States by saying that lax statistical methods employed in other countries have been responsible for their better standing. This explanation no longer holds good. The Federal Children's Bureau has completed a study which shows that even when the least rigid method of designating death causes is used, this country still ranks as one of those with the highest maternity mortality. Czechoslovakia, Denmark, England, Wales, Estonia, France, Ireland, Italy, Holland, New Zealand, Norway and Sweden all have a smaller proportion of deaths from this cause. According to the Children's Bureau's investigation, only Australia, Canada, Chile and Scotland have higher childbirth death rates than the United States. To put the findings another way, in six of the years from 1915 to 1932, the United States had the highest rate, while in the other years it ranked either second or third.

So long as 63 mothers die in childbirth per 1,000 in this country, as against 35 per 1,000 in Denmark, a great public health problem remains unsolved.

Immigration And Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The immigration bill, H. R. 8163, just introduced, is merely the alien measure overwhelmingly defeated in the House last June.

Essentially, the bills are the same in that they would authorize the Secretary of Labor and the Commissioner of Immigration to allow alien law-breakers "to remain" in the United States, to legalize illegal alien entries, and even to "change" the temporary admissions of alien visitors, students, embassy employes, deserting alien seamen and the like into "admissions for permanent residence" and citizenship, the sort of thing they have been doing without statutory authority the past two years and that has increased alien deportations from its previous annual average of over 19,000 to less than 9,000 last year.

Charity and employment should begin at home. Each country should look after its own. Deportation is not imprisonment, but as a rule is returning an alien to his homeland—his best refuge. Our employment and relief problems are largely imported. The last census reveals over 14,000,000 foreign born and about 25,000,000 persons of foreign parentage, almost the precise number of unemployed and reliefers.

Every other country excludes every job-hunter and relief seeker and even registers and compels aliens to report periodically. Why don't we? For the protection of the legally admitted and law abiding alien as well as our own.

Loser's Privilege.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When I practiced law in the country and lost a law suit in the courts, it was always my high privilege, during those "horse and buggy days," to go down to the corner grocery and alibi by telling my friends what a fool the court made of itself. A LAWYER.

"Shriners Should Protest."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nero himself would have goggled in envy at the case of the District Commissioners prohibiting all parking in the business and governmental areas of Washington for the week of the Shriners' Convention.

What is this space to be used for? Are we to have continuous purple-painted parades extending from curb to curb for seven long days and nights? Perhaps the President, Congress and all the departmental staffs should also be banished during this holy week and their buildings turned over to the infantile antics of the visitors. Or how would it do to make the whole nonparking district into a plague zone for the week and prohibit all residents and normal visitors from entering it?

The extenuation offered is that the Shriners will bring $12,000,000 to Washington. I venture to assert that they will bring just as much, and return as quickly again, if a little consideration for their hosts is involved. The Shriners themselves should protest this outrageous decree.

Chiselers, Ahoy!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was to cure unfair competition which led to the automobile code. Thousands of dealers all over the country hailed this code with joy and implored Congress to maintain it. Their hopes are blasted, ruinous competition has begun again.

Chiselers got their names in the papers, code observers were never mentioned.

Emphatically, No.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the United States Constitution confers no authority, expressed or implied, upon the Supreme Court to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional, would not the court's declaration that the NRA is void be an excellent reason and this an excellent time for repudiation of such action by the court?

CLARENCE V. TIERS.

Income Tax Checks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "A Poor Plan," in The Post of May 31, is much appreciated by a "little fellow" who has been put to considerable inconvenience by the employes who are already working on the income tax returns. If new and less efficient clerks are put to work checking income taxes, who can say what the result may be? Too much checking, rechecking, and corresponding is apparently conducted under the present system. If this is to be multiplied what will become of the poor taxpayers? In my own case there has been seldom, if ever, a year without some question being asked, although no correction has ever been necessary. Could not some system be devised by which the report made to an authorized agent of the Government could be final without all this petty annoyance and inconvenience? Money spent on producing such a system would be well invested.

May your good work continue.

Oxen Days.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see Mr. Roosevelt bemoans the fact that the Supreme Court decision on NRA took us back to "horse and buggy days." Well, the FERA has been going them a decade better around here—they are issuing scrub oxen with brand-new yokes to the "subsistence" farmers.

Looks like the Supreme Court checked our speed backward at that. D. W. WEOM.

Urges Third Light.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the editor of The Post could perform a miracle, he might induce our traffic director to walk up and down the main streets of Washington and notice the antics of the "so-called" human race making left turns against traffic. Then notice the dangerous condition on Constitution avenue across Pennsylvania avenue at John Marshall place where everything goes across on the green light.

Now the prize imbecility of Dupont Circle and Thomas Circle is not repeated here by telling pedestrians to go "across on the red light"—but before the Shriners come and some pedestrian gets killed going across on the green, the great heads of our traffic department might find out how Philadelphia and other civilized cities do it. There they walk on another colored light and all traffic except foot traffic stops. There is still a policeman and not a traffic light at Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

Books Needed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Labrador and northern Newfoundland, Sir Wilfred Grenfell has established four hospitals, seven nursing stations, three hospital ships, four combined orphanage-boarding schools, four summer schools, 14 industrial centers, 12 clothing distribution centers, and other relief agencies.

Sir Wilfred's stations all need books. If you care to help in this work, please send any good books you can spare, parcel post or express prepaid, to the Grenfell Association of America, 156 Fifth avenue, New York.

Politics Of South.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent decisions of the Supreme Court and the declaration of the President have clearly denied and forecast the issues of the next national political campaign, namely, constitutional and local self-government versus centralized socialist government tinctured with communism.

The Administration, masquerading under the flag of the Democratic Party, has repudiated every principal for which the party has stood since its inception.

The action of the South in giving advocacy and support to the policies of the Administration, which are a stultification and repudiation of everything for which the South has heretofore stood and fought for, is inexplicable except upon the ground that the politics of the South is now in control of what we used to call "poor white trash." The writer is grieved at the political degeneracy of his native section, but hopes that it will in time recover its political sanity. A. S. L.

Recovery Ahead.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Exit the "flexible" Constitution invented by Washington conspirators bent on destroying the States and centralizing all authority in the Federal Government. Exit the Presidential dictatorship. Exit the "Roosevelt revolution." NRA's lawless legalizing of price-fixing monopolies is ended. AAA's lawless and senseless restriction of food and cotton production will be ended as soon as the Supreme Court can act on it.

The way is now open for the natural recovery from depression which began in the summer of 1932, which was halted and delayed by policies of the Roosevelt Administration, and which will be resumed in full force the day American business men become convinced the elections of 1936 will restore sanity and stability in the National Government. Roosevelt I's Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Theodore Roosevelt, when he was President, advocated an amendment to the United States Constitution which would permit the "recall" of decisions of the Supreme Court, upon referendum to popular vote.

The Post Impressionist

The Manx Cat.

Post Office, Tuesday.

MONTGOMERY said there were some things about Washington that he couldn't understand. He said:

"I've been in Washington for six months, and yet there are some things about it I can't understand."

We said we knew some Congressmen who are serving their third consecutive terms (in Congress) and agreed with Montgomery. We said we knew one man who was born in Washington and had never left it but once in all his seven decades and still couldn't understand it. We said he always had to take a taxi to cross Connecticut avenue at M street at 5 p. m. But we added:

"Just what are a few of the things about Washington that have thus far evaded your pursuit?"

And Montgomery said: "Tails—I mean when you wear them and when not."

"I'm not quite a fool," Montgomery necessarily explained. "I know tails are formal and dinner-coats aren't—or at least usen't to be—or, anyway, most places. But Washington——

"It's like this," said Montgomery: "My grandfather was brought up before there were any dinner-coats. So, when they came in—he told me they called them 'Tuxedos' then—he was old and against them for any occasion at all. He thought nobody was a gentleman who hadn't tails.

"By and by, my father—when he was at college—got to wearing a dinner coat, first at class smokers and then on the glee club. Still, he never thought it was quite decent to wear them when there were any women around—except, of course, if it was only my mother.

"And, then, by the time I was ready for long pants—well, you know yourself how it is now; you wear a dinner-coat most anywhere that's not all-out formal: something really formal, you know."

Evidently Montgomery didn't anticipate any rigidity when, fresh from Spokane, he sought out the diplomatic center of the United States. Unlike Bopeep's sheep, he dragged no tails behind him.

"It went all right," he said, "till here the other day I got a bid to a big dinner and felt kind of bothered. So I asked the wife of a friend of my father's about it: they've lived in Georgetown since before the war, and I figured she ought to know.

"She said, 'But, Montgomery, that party's a big affair—of course, it's tails!'

"I said, well, I wanted mighty much to go, but when it came to tails I was a regular Manx cat; or, anyway, mine were in Spokane, or ought to be if mother'd remembered to pack 'em in moth-balls, or the termites had forgotten to eat 'em. And I said there wasn't time now to get them here in time, not even by plane, nor to have new ones made, for that matter—even if I could afford it, and I couldn't even afford to buy ready-made ones just now.

"So, she said—my father's friend's wife—couldn't I wear Frank's? Frank's her husband. But, I said, couldn't she see I couldn't, with his figure and mine?

"Then she said—and this is what I was coming to:

"'You just can't go to that dinner except in tails. But would you mind going later—for coffee, I mean, and the music?'

"I said I wouldn't—not much. What I wanted was to be able to say I'd been there, without lying.

"'Oh, in that case,' she said, 'it's simple enough. I tell you what you do: You write to your hostess right off and explain the whole thing, and perhaps she'll say it will be all right for you to drop in after dinner in a dinner-jacket.'

"I repeated: 'After dinner in a dinner-jacket?'

"She said: 'Yes, of course, that's the solution. There's a whole lot invited for after dinner, and I'm sure a good many will go then in dinner-coats. Of course you couldn't go to the dinner in a dinner coat, but, naturally, afterwards is different.'

"I said: 'Wait a minute. You mean a dinner-coat isn't all right at dinner, but——'

"She said: 'Not at a formal dinner. A dinner-coat would be all right at a formal dinner before the dinner, if you weren't invited, but were a friend and just dropped in for the cocktails and right out again before dinner was served. Or a dinner-coat wouldn't be so bad—or, anyway, quite so noticeable—at a formal dinner, if you didn't come till after the dinner, but just dropped in from your club for the coffee, as if it was kind of by chance.

"'Most formal diners in Washington, unless they're almost diplomatic dinners or quite'—that's what my father's friend's wife said—"aren't any more formal than that. They're formal for the dinner-part—very. But in Washington quite a good many people wear dinner-coats if it's after dinner.'

"So I'm going to that dinner after dinner," concluded Montgomery. "But what I don't understand is why they don't call dinner-coats 'Tuxedos' like they did in my grandfather's time."

Demand a Good Price

"I'LL bet you'll be surprised to hear that I'm gonna quit this business," said Pete, the taxi driver. "Yes, I've got an idea which oughta make me plenty of money. I've got an idea for a movement. It's a darned good movement, too, even if I do say so myself. It's about as important as any of these other movements around here.

"Only this morning I told the little missus about it. She didn't take so much to the idea, but it's because she ain't adventurous like me. She thinks she's got security now like she is, but I likes to advance. After all, the bread-winner's got to be bold. And I don't think it's up to the little missus to be discouraging to me, do you? It will be all right after I get into the movement, though. She'll come right around and be encouraging me just as much in it as she has been in this taxi business. She's a good sport.

"I got the idea for my movement when I read that Mr. Roosevelt in his campaign to get the people to throw off the shackles of the Supreme Court and make him the big boss is going to promise the workers and the farmers more money. This is what Mr. Hitler did, you remember. Only when they made him the big boss he didn't give 'em any more money at all. That's what we gotta watch. Right off the reel when I heard what he intended to do I didn't get my idea for a movement because I figured that no mattered how much he offered, the people wouldn't give him this power, but then I read in the papers where a big Republican leader said he expected Mr. Roosevelt would make quite an appeal in this way.

"Then's when I knew I had a movement. This leader's attitude is just about the same as the other Republicans. They would be a-scared to fight regardless of what Mr. Roosevelt did. He would offer the people more money and the Republicans would say, 'Well, you can't fight such an appeal as that; we better go along with him.'

• • • • •

"And I'm not denying they have the situation sized up about right. It's amazing what people'll do for money. But I'm gonna get up a movement to see that they don't sell out cheap. After all, the man who wants to buy our freedom oughta pay high for it, don't you think?

"Now, there's the farmers. I bet, if they just hold out, and say no, no to the first offers, that they can boost their processing taxes up no end. Let's see, they get 4 cents a pound on cotton. Well, when Mr. Roosevelt comes a-pleading that we take the power away from the Supreme Court and give it to him so he can hold up the price of cotton, the farmers oughta say, 'Be specific, hold it up to how much?' And he'll laugh and say, 'Oh, to 14 or 15 cents' and the farmer'll say. 'Oh, no you don't. This is no laughing mater. After all, it's you that wants this power. Come on, how high will you go?' They oughta be able to run him up to at least 25 cents a pound. To give away our freedom for 14 or 15 cents a pound is ridiculous, particularly when he's gonna have to give the city workers something, too, and when he gives them as much as he does the farmers then they haven't been given anything at all.

"But people don't pay any attention to that. What they like to see is the glitter of the coin.

"I suppose some people would say my movement wouldn't appeal to the workers because they've got the American Federation of Labor, but they are crazy. Willie Green won't do any good bargaining for them. All Mr. Roosevelt would have to promise him is something like Section 7(a) or the Wagner labor disputes bill. That's because he wants members. Yet he don't seem to be able to get the members. He's crying now that if the Supreme Court nad just held up its decision for two years or if we will overlook it for two years he'll be able to get members and be all right.

"All the workers oughta be convinced that he's no one to be bargaining for them in this game where the stakes are to be high. They oughta join my movement. I'll demand that they all get 50 per cent increases and no monkey shines. Before we let Mr. Roosevelt have this power we'll make him sign on the dotted line.

"And another thing, we will make him agree to pay with dollars of prescribed gold content. We don't want any of that business of promised increases and then a depreciated currency.

"If we sit pretty he'll come across 'cause it's very apparent he wants this power very bad.

"Well, here's where you get out."

"I'm sorry, girls, but now that they've junked NRA, I'll have to let one of you go!"

And Now France

Current Run On Gold Of Bank Of France Represents Fourth In As Many Years Throughout World, Threatening Even Greater Chaos In The Field Of International Trade.

THE present run on the gold stock of the Bank of France is one of the four spectacular events of the kind that have occurred during the last four years.

The German Reichsbank drain, which took place in the middle of 1931, followed the banking and currency collapse in Austria and neighboring states. In spite of a temporary gold loan amounting to $100,000,000, furnished by the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank for International Settlements, and the Federal Reserve System of the United States, the gold reserves of the Reichsbank were drastically reduced. The amount of the gold drain, however, did not run into spectacular figures because Germany did not have large holdings as compared with some other countries.

Next followed the English gold drain. This represented apprehension about the economic and financial position of England and was precipitated by the German and Central European situation, in which English banking was heavily involved. The Bank of England, unlike the Bank of France in the present crisis, made little effort to stop the drain by raising the discount rate, but tried to meet it by borrowing in foreign countries. The Federal Reserve System and the Bank of France each advanced about $125,000,000. Credits were also negotiated by the British government in the Paris and New York markets through other channels amounting to another $200,000,000 in each country—$650,000,000 in all.

Short-time borrowings by the Bank of England merely delayed and did not prevent abandonment of the gold standard. There may be reason to believe that had credit of the same or somewhat larger amount been arranged, on a three, five or ten-year basis, for use as a stabilization fund, the battle might have been won, assuming the desire to remain on the gold standard was a genuine one, which it appeared to be at the time. Short-time borrowing from the Federal Reserve Banks of the United States and the Bank of France, and short-time obligations in the private banking field, were not suitable to meet the kind of a strain which the English had to meet.

• • • • •

THE breakdown of the gold standard in England in turn had important repercussions in the United States. Large foreign exchange reserves had been built up during the post-war period in many countries. They were concentrated for the main part in deposits in London and in the United States. Deposits in these markets were considered the equivalent of gold. The English experience demonstrated dramatically that the only thing that could be safely counted as gold reserves was gold in the vaults of the central bank at home.

Beginning on Monday, September 21, 1931, the first business day after the English announcement, the repatriation from the United States of deposits by governments and by central banks all over the world began. In five weeks following the English incident, withdrawals for export, or earmarking of gold, totaled approximately $725,000,000. This drain the Federal Reserve system stood without difficulty.

The movement abated at the end of five weeks. While it continued off and on until the account with the French was finally liquidated about the middle of June, 1932, the discount rate, which at the time of the English incident was 1½ per cent, was raised to only 3½ per cent by two raises of 1 per cent each in October, 1931. In this period there was some currency hoarding in the United States, but there was no substantial gold hoarding. There was no doubt of the ability of the United States to stay on the gold standard if it so desired.

In the year preceding the abandonment of gold payments in England, foreign government and central bank balances in the United States had been reduced some 25 per cent. They were still large, however, in September, 1931, when foreign countries began to repatriate their gold reserves in large amounts. At no time, however, was there a question of our ability to meet any and all claims of foreigners for payment in gold.

• • • • •

AT present a spectacular drain on a gold standard nation is occurring in France and much of the gold is finding its way to our shores. The gold drain from the United States in 1931 was mainly a withdrawal of credit balances, aggravated probably by some genuine flight of capital from this country to other countries, notably France and Switzerland, and aggravated also in a minor way by speculative transactions.

The present drain in Paris appears to be of a more complex nature. There is a strong movement for devaluation in France, and the advocates of this course no doubt are working to create fear as a means of bringing about the desired result, regardless of the wishes or intentions of the government. This is the cause, in part, of the withdrawal of gold bars, which the law permits in France. The people of the country are no doubt hoarding gold while the opportunity still exists.

Large government deficits are another effective cause for distrust. Balancing the budget involves the question of increased taxes or reduction of expenses, and one of the great items of expenses that enters into the political situation is salaries of government employes, who are very numerous in France. The political power of the government functionaries works against the reduction of expenses; the military situation works in favor of increased expenditures. The politics of the situation work against the balancing of the budget and the relatively large deficit works against monetary soundness. All this, of course, induces flight of capital on the part of the French and also causes withdrawals of balances by foreigners.

CONTRARY to the English policy, and to a greater degree than was necessary in the United States, the Bank of France is trying to use discount rates to discourage withdrawals and to attract funds.

A 6 per cent rate by the Bank of France may be an effective factor, but generally speaking when fright takes place in connection with currencies the increase of the interest rate is a minor lever in a major operation. It is hard to believe that the English situation would have been different even if they had raised the discount rate more drastically. If the French desire to remain on the present gold basis and succeed in doing so, their discount rate policy will be one of the contributing factors, but not the determining one.

If the forces operating on both sides of the monetary situation in France could be counted, it would probably be found that the large industrial and business interests are in favor of devalution on account of the economic crisis, and that the small capitalists, the farmers, pensioners, and salary and wage earners are against it because they know that their incomes do not rise in proportion as prices rise through inflationary processes.

The farmer in France is unlike the farmer in America. He is more apt to be a creditor than a debtor. Inflation in America gained support from the great debtor group in the agricultural class. In France the farmers like to own their property, save money, buy government bonds, and the dominating proportion of them do so.

• • • • •

THE outcome is uncertain, but the situation is of much more than local interest. Should France, by choice or necessity, discontinue gold payments, it is difficult to see how other European countries can succeed in continuing. Some think that if all countries were off the gold standard it would be easier to have an international conference with a view to the stabilization of currencies. But it is difficult to see how more and more instability increases the chances for stability. Reconciliation of the points of view becomes ever and increasingly more difficult.

The Administration in this country, having added to instability all over the world, is now seeking to restore stability, but the forces of instability are easier to set in motion than to arrest.

Michaud's Review

By

William Lyon Phelps

I IMAGINE a vast number of fairly well-read Americans, have the haziest ideas (if they have any) about various French writers, whose names occur frequently in the pages of book reviews in the daily and weekly journals; Marcel Proust (rhymes with boost) is a good illustration.

Well, an excellent book, small in size, filled with information and critical comment, has recently appeared, which ought to be useful to hundreds, perhaps thousands of Americans.

• • • • •

This volume, of about 300 pages, is called "Modern Thought and Literature in France," and is by Regis Michaud. (Published by Funk and Wagnalls).

It is a critical and explanatory review of the literature and thought and various movements in art and drama, etc., in France, during the years since 1900. The chapter headings show the ground covered Main Literary Highways, Late Symbolism and the Cathedral of Paul Claudel. The Revelation of Marcel Proust, The Leadership of Andre Gide, Georges Duhamel, Jules Romains, and Unanimism, etc., etc., 14 chapters in all, with a good bibliography and indexes.

The author is professor of French literature at the University of Illinois. He was born in France and has taught at Princeton, Smith, Dartmouth, Columbia; he has translated authors as different as Emerson and Sinclair Lewis into French.

The fact that he is a teacher of 20 years' experience of French literature to American pupils of course fits him especially for this particular task. It is a good book.

No End of Books

Girls On Their Own.

MISS M. CAREY THOMAS (M. stands for Martha, but she never uses it) is remembered by 30 college generations of Bryn Mawr women as the indomitable and rather fearsome old lady who put Bryn Mawr on the map. In her presidency it started at scratch; she left it, 12 years ago, the richest women's college per student in the world, the beacon light of feminine intellectuality in this country. More about Miss Thomas and Bryn Mawr you can read in a most able article in the June issue of Fortune.

But one little item I liked especially. Miss Thomas was once in Constantinople—she used to take wide, expansive tours in the grand manner—and she sat down to lunch over copy of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, "This Freedom." Now it doesn't take much guessing to realize that Miss Thomas has very decided ideas about women's emancipation—after all, she was the one who said she'd make her college tests as hard as Harvard's, her graduate department the equal of Johns Hopkins. And when she found, half-way through the lunch and the novel, that Mr. Hutchinson was going to make out a case for women's freedom which would be conspicuous for nothing so much as the tongue in the cheek, there was but one thing for Miss Thomas to do.

"Waiter," she said, "take this book and throw it in the Bosphorus!"

• • • • •

WELL, Miss Thomas and a few other factors including the Great War have certainly brought women up to a howdy-do with "freedom." And then I pick up Frances Angell's little book for girls on their own: "Compete!" (Dorrance, $1.25), and I'm flabbergasted, as mere man, at the codes and observances and restrictions which really hedge them in.

Not since Alice Leone Moats' sprightly little work: "No Nice Girl Swears," has the reputedly fair sex been given a book of practicing etiquette which wasn't tied stiffly to the Emily Post. Like Miss M., Miss Angell knows that well-mannered living involves something more than the proper kind of engraving on a wedding announcement or the au fait use of an oyster fork. But where Miss M. told debs in edged but sensible language just how to conduct themselves with elderly prom-trotters and enraptured Princeton men, Miss Angell takes up the rather more common problems of the working girl.

I am one of you, says Miss Angell, and here's the dope. And then we go blithely into everything from how to get a job, how to hold to one, what to do about the boss and the boss' wife, how to walk down a movie aisle and how to suggest gallery seats at the play, and the fact that really interesting girls don't say: "for crying out loud," "big boy," "pipe down," and "my gawd." Not a stone is left unturned—Miss Angell will tell you "how to be popular though good" (a grand old subject which isn't written out yet, by any means), what to do about sloping shoulders, what to say when your dancing partner steps on your foot, and (good point) how not to smile all the time at a party.

Above all, says Miss Angell, don't be ashamed of the fact that you work for a living. "Think what would happen to some society girls if they were suddenly faced with the necessity of earning their own living. Some of them, of course, would carry on courageously, but many others would not get to first base in spite of their superior advantages." And by the same token, she says, don't envy the college graduates. In fact, she gets out the big stick for these, especially the sorority girls, whom she says are turned out in "types" as similar as a set of uniforms. Backing her up in this, a young college man writes a supplementary chapter—"the sorority system," he declares, "is one of the permitted tragedies of the American educational system."

And so we come out on the perfectly sound ground that it's all up to the girl herself. "Respect yourself," cries Miss Angell, "and compete!"

BUT I'm still a bit staggered. Here's woman's "freedom" large as life before us—and this most sensible of feminine vade mecums surrounds a girl with more adjurations and tests and niceties than she could carry out in a month. I'm pretty sure that no man would read a book which told him exactly how to behave on a week-end visit or implored him with some masculine counterpart of: "Don't be kittenish!"

Perhaps that's a pity. Miss Angell could obviously assemble a triple decalogue for men which a number of wives and sweethearts would like to see in certain hands. But 41,000 do-or-die rules for girls on their own puts a new complexion on feminine emancipation. We really ought to give up these big and meaningless words.

cies which the major parties must adopt. Hence it has the unique, if somewhat gloomy prospect of being always a bridesmaid but never a bride in the matter of national policy. It is dead right about the fact that a marriage is taking place but it is never found in the double-bed of practical politics on election night.

New Deal Follows Socialists' '32 Platform

A glance at some of the principal planks of the Socialist Party program for the presidential election of 1932 reveals the interesting fact that the main outlines of the "New Deal," which partisan critics of the Roosevelt Administration are unable to locate in the Democratic Party program of that year, were quite definitely indicated by Mr. Norman Thomas and his half-shell Marxists:

1. Entry of the United States into the League of Nations. (Checked by the Senate defeat of the World Court Protocol.)

2. Federal appropriations of $5,000,000,000 for immediate relief and an additional $5,000,000,000 for a public works program. (Cf. PWA, FERA and the current work relief measure.)

3. Six-hour day and five-day week without reduction in pay. (Approached through the Connery bill.)

4. A minimum wage. (NRA.)

5. Government unemployment insurance. (Current social security program.)

6. Old-age pensions. (Ditto.)

7. Health and maternity insurance. (Ditto.)

8. Improved workmen's compensation and accident insurance. (State laws.)

9. Abolition of child labor. (NRA.)

10. Laws facilitating the organization of labor unions and prohibiting "yellow dog" contracts. (NRA.)

11. Steeply increased inheritance taxes and income taxes of the higher incomes. (Revenue Act of 1934—but not high enough to please the Socialists.)

12. Tax on all Government securities. (Under consideration but constitutional amendment is probably necessary.)

13. A two-year moratorium on foreclosures and tax sales of farms and homes, with suspension of all interest payments, for this period. (Farm Credit Administration, HOLC and State laws.)

14. Socialization of power, banking and other industries. (Approached in TVA yardstick, proposed amendments to Federal Reserve Act, Deposit Insurance, etc.)

15. Lowering of farm taxes. (Recommended to State and County Governments.)

17. Economic, political and legal equality for Negroes. (Not while the South is in the saddle.)

18. Drastic anti-lynching laws. (Ditto, but consider the Costigan-Wagner bill.)

19. Disarmament, not as a panacea but to make a sudden war less likely. (State Department policy but abandoned as a unilateral attitude as result of European and Far Eastern situation.)

20. Cancellation of war debts and reparations, provided such action is linked with disarmament. (Done without our open consent.)

21. The end of collecting private debts in weak nations by military force and of such "imperialism" as America has practiced in Haiti and Nicaragua. (Done by executive action)

22. Agreement with other nations not to finance or furnish war supplies to an aggressor nation which ignores its treaty obligations. (Proposed by current Administration draft of neutrality laws and by proposed embargoes)

23. Tariff reductions. (The reciprocal trade agreements act of 1934)

24. A world conference on a fiscal system and allocation of raw materials. (The London Economic Conference of 1933)

25. Philippine independence. (Done by act of Congress—but it takes ten years)

26. Public employment exchanges. (Done by Wagner bill of 1932-33)

As Robles Sees Norman Thomas

Thomas' Land Policy Begins to Take Shape

To this comprehensive program, Mr. Thomas added the observation in his campaign pamphlet, "The Socialist Cure for a Sick Society," that "These things will not take place or will be relatively futile until we press actual change in ownership of land, natural resources and principal means of production." (See the Land Policy Section of the Department of Agriculture, the Power Commission, Utilities Holding Co. proposals, the TVA, and the program of the National Resources Board.)

The leader of this Socialist campaign of education, Norman Mattoon Thomas, was born in Marion, Ohio, 51 years ago, the son of a Presbyterian minister, and was conventional enough to decide at an early age that the eldest son should follow his father's profession. As a boy, Thomas made only one conventional "political" gesture; he carried newspapers for none other than that eminent small-town newspaper, the Marion Star, owned by the late Warren Gamaliel Harding.

As a minister's son, young Thomas was born into an energetically fermenting "social consciousness." His mother took an active interest in community affairs and when the family moved to Lewisberry, Pa., she became a member of the local school board. Book learning is also traditionally valued in a clergyman's home and Norman was frequently found with his nose in a book although the cult of "muscular Christianity" induced him to select as his favorite exercise boxing, in which he became a neighborhood champion.

After a listless freshman year at Bucknell, relatives enabled him to realize his ambition to attend Princeton, where he earned part of his expenses and was distinguished for his scholarship and for his skill in debating. He fell most strongly under the influence of Woodrow Wilson, who was then teaching at "Old Nassau" and has tended ever since to ape Wilson's rather pedantic style of writing. There is also a great similarity in the rhetoric of these two men, who did so much to direct the political thought of the American Nation during the last generation.

Social Worker 2 Years After His Graduation

After his graduation he spent a couple of years as a social worker in a "settlement house" in the ghastly Spring Street slums of New York City, where his book of learning was heavily edited by the "higher criticism" of hunger, unemployment and general misery. Troubled in heart, he took a trip around the world and on his return became assistant pastor to the Christ Church Settlement. There he met Frances Violet Stewart, a serious minded social worker of the Frances Perkins stripe, who was beginning to organize one of the first American clinics for the treatment of tuberculosis. They were married in 1910.

At this stage, Thomas was still following the role of clergman, in the belief that religion would provide the solution to the social problems of the age. He became assistant to Dr. Henry Van Dyke, at the fashionable Fifth Avenue Brick Church, and continued his studies at Union Theological Seminary. When it came time for him to be examined by the august New York Presbytery, his views were an unorthodox rebellion against all the musty cant of the standardized tenets. Startled members of the Presbytery questioned this attractive and very masculine young rebel for an entire afternoon, at the end of which they permitted him to be ordained. It was Norman Thomas' first appearance in public print, for the newspapers featured the ordination of this "heretic," but that was before the war, and it was still considered genteel for a young clergyman to take a warm interest in humanity. Experience no doubt would later tone down much of such assertiveness.

So he and his young wife went to the American Parish in one of the most down-at-heels sections of East Harlem in New York City, where they remained six years. Then he became completely disillusioned with the idea that the religious "settlement' house" was something much more than the old patronizing system of giving cast-off clothing and an occasianal basket of food to the "deserving (and respectful) poor."

In the meantime the World War had opened up to Norman Thomas a real political career, although he did not at first realize it. He opposed war in principle, announced that he would not fight and that he would give no support from his pulpit to the ideal of organized international massacre. Morris Hillquit was then, as usual, running for the mayoralty on the Socialist ticket, and Thomas wrote Hillquit pledging his support. His pacifism had frightened his few wealthy parishioners, but Socialism on top of it was too much for them: Thomas resigned. Since then he has been through with the ministry, although he has never been able to shake off his pulpit manner and the Communists delight in portraying him as an effete, effeminate curate.

With a few friends Thomas then founded The New World, which was almost immediately rechristened The World Tomorrow. It was a pale pink magazine, which recently was merged with another liberal religious magazine. With the usual astuteness of Government bureaucrats, the Department of Justice concluded that Thomas was a dangerous revolutionist. During the war their agents shadowed him constantly, tapped his telephone wires, opened his mail and sent reams of illiterate notes to Washington reporting his "subversive" activities. Postmaster Burleson regarded Thomas as a menace, "worse than Debs," and tried to suppress The World Tomorrow. The Government couldn't touch him under the selective service act, for he was just beyond the age limit for the first draft and had too many children (he is the father of six children, five of whom are living) to be included in the second. Thomas was especially critical of the treatment accorded to jailed conscientious objectors during the war, and did not modify his attitude, as did many of his Socialist colleagues, including Upton Sinclair. Instead, with Roger N. Baldwin, Thomas helped to found the National Civil Liberties Union, now the American Civil Liberties Union.

His Income, Ironically, Is Unsocialistic One

It is amusing to note that the least defensible feature of capitalism—unearned income—was the means by which Norman Thomas was able to keep going as a Socialist leader. Mrs. Thomas had inherited a small but regular income, so that he did not need to worry or work for the necessities of his large family, although, unlike that great and vertically endowed "radical," Oswald Garrison Villard, Thomas lived—and lives—in a simplicity which accords with his Socialist beliefs.

During the year 1921-22, he was associate editor of Villard's Nation. Then he threw his time and energies into building up the League for Industrial Democracy, the successor of the old Intercollegiate Socialist Party.

He took a very active part in the 1926-27 wool workers' strike in Passaic, when he went to Passaic nearly every day and cheered the strikers on, getting money for them and seeing that it was equitably distributed. When the sheriff of Bergen County dictated, in the manner conventional to the local authorities of a "kept State," that no more public meetings might be held by the strikers, Thomas decided to test the decision. He rented a vacant lot, where he began to praise the traditional liberalism of Thomas Jefferson. Big strike-duty cops jerked him into a police car and hurried him to a night in a distant jail, so remote that his friends failed to find him before morning, as he was unable to post a $10,000 bond. He was then released and the ban on meetings was held illegal. In the future the police did not interfere with the strikers' gatherings.

He has never taken any of his personal political campaigns seriously and regards them as educational tours. In 1928, although he covered the country pretty thoroughly, he polled only slightly more than a quarter of a million votes, the lowest Socialist national vote since 1900. This, however, may be partly due to the practice in many precincts of not counting the Socialist votes or of throwing Socialist votes into whichever column is most convenient to the local bosses. At the time several newspapers commented on the dignity of Thomas' 1928 campaign, in contrast with the cat-and-dog grotesqueries of the Hoover-Smith wrangle. Thomas said, with his characteristic irony, "I appreciate the flowers, only I wish the funeral hadn't been so complete."

He is today the hero of the timid college student and of the stenographer who has tried to read Spengler but has been discouraged by that awful task. He is the white-collar Socialist leader, the college professor of the proletarians, with the fluent pedantry of the professional teacher and pulpiteer, the rigid logic of the Wilsonian school of Presbyterian politics, and the heavy ironic humor of one who is bookish rather than realistic in his approach to life.

Buffaloes Dispute Open Road With Cars in Missouri Ozarks

Beasts Eye Driver, Advance Parade Majestically—Right on Past

By the United Press.

Eminence, Mo.—There are many wild spots in the Missouri Ozarks, and the sight of a bobcat is not unusual, but when J. I. Estes, of St. Louis, found four buffalo disputing the right-of-way with him on a by-road he was both alarmed and surprised.

Estes, field representative of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, came to Eminence to check up on some property taken over by the RFC when the Shannon County Bank failed. Accompanied by W. A. French, of Eminence, he was driving out to the Shawnee Creek community to view a farm.

"A beautiful country," said Estes admiringly as he eased his car along the by-road. "Trees, hills, streams. It's all wonderful."

French, to whom the natural beauty was an old story, nodded agreement.

"Everything is so serene and quiet," continued Estes, "I don't imagine anything ever occurs here to upset the quiet. No trouble, no adventures, I——"

Estes stopped in midsentence and jammed on the brakes, for, as he turned a curve, his car had come upon four buffaloes standing in the center of the road.

The great bull tossed his shaggy mane and shook his horns menacingly at the car. His little red eyes gleamed wickedly, or so Estes thought. Two cows and a yearling calf stood behind him.

The beasts eyed the car and Estes and French eyed them.

"What'll we do" asked Estes. "I can't get by and I can't turn around."

"Just take it easy a minute," counseled French. "I don't think they will bother us."

"Maybe they won't, but I don't like the big fellow's eyes," whispered Estes. "He looks mean."

Just then the buffaloes started toward the car. Down the center of the road they came. Just when Estes believed they were going to walk right into the car the bull veered to one side, the others following, and they paraded past the automobile. With the road clear, Estes drove rapidly ahead.

The buffalo, French later assured Estes, do not run wild in the Ozarks. They were brought to Shannon County by Mrs. Lenora Young, Oklahoma Osage Indian, who purchased several thousand acres in Shannon County in the hope of finding copper. When that venture failed to materialize, she decided to start a buffalo ranch and imported several animals.

The four encountered on the road had broken from a field. They later were rounded up.

Here's Political Race Without Candidates

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., June 3.—The race for the mayor's office and seats on the town council of Scottsville, birthplace of the late Thomas Staples Martin, United States Senator, promises to be anything but hectic.

The six council members and the mayor, who are unopposed, apparently forgot that their names had to be on the books 60 days before the election, June 11, so voters will merely write in a name for mayor and six for the councilmen.

All of the councilmen and the mayor have agreed to serve if re-elected. The mayor is T. E. Bruce and the councilmen, Dr. R. L. Stinson, R. C. Kent, F. W. Sprague, J. A. Mouldon, Guy E. Moon and Dr. Percy Harris.

After his appointment as people's counsel of the Maryland Public Service Commission by Gov. Nice several weeks ago, Mr. James announced his intention to resign.

Extension of Time for Testimony in Recount Suit Is Granted.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak St., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Mrs. Clara C. Holmes, of Montrose, Md., yesterday was chosen chairman of the Montgomery County board of election supervisors at the organization meeting of that body in the Rockville, Md., courthouse.

Mrs. Holmes, vice chairman of the Republican State central committee for the county, seconded the nomination of Gov. Harry W. Nice and has been active for years in Republican circles. Her selection as chairman was recommended by the State central committee.

The election board met with the retiring board and the new members took office. Besides Mrs. Holmes, the board is composed of Carey Kingdon (Republican), Rockville, and Hugh F. O'Donnel (Democrat), Silver Spring.

The board failed to name a new clerk and counsel and F. Byrne Austin will continue to function until a new clerk is appointed.

A petition for extension of the time for taking testimony in the recount suit of John B. Diamond and Raleigh S. Chinn, Democrats, against Frank H. Karn and Charles E. King, Fusionists, was granted yesterday by Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Associate Judge Arthur D. Willard in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

The petition alleged that a number of witnesses who were summoned at the hearing last week failed to appear and that their testimony is necessary for the proper presentation of the case.

The judges granted an extension until June 15 for presentation of the testimony.

Mrs. George Morey, chairman of legislation for the Montgomery County Federation of Women's clubs will be the guest speaker at the annual picnic of the Woman's Improvement Club of Silver Spring, Md., at Jesup Blair Park tomorrow. The affair will be held from 11 a. m. until 4 p. m.

The club has changed its meeting place from the fourth Tuesday of each month to the second Thursday.

About 50 cartons of cigarettes were stolen from the Piggly Wiggly store at 224 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., when thieves broke into the place.

Takoma Park police discovered that the robbers entered the store by way of a skylight, cutting the iron bars underneath it and dropping down on a rope hanging from the skylight. They apparently made their escape from the back door, the lock on the side being broken. The police believe the robbery occurred early yesterday morning or late Sunday night and that it was the work of two persons.

Laycock Seeks Post as Clerk For Arlington

Clarendon Man Candidate for County Job, Subject to Primary.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

C. Benjamin Laycock, of Clarendon, yesterday announced his candidacy for the office of county clerk, subject to the Democratic primary August 6.

Laycock was born in Leesburg, Loudoun County. He moved in 1914 to Westover street, Clarendon.

Laycock is deputy commissioner of revenue in the county, having served the last 16 years under Commissioner Harry K. Green.

In an announcement Laycock said:

"There is, in many respects, a correspondence between the clerk's work and that of the commissioner of revenue. All deeds of bargain and sale and all deeds of trust recorded in the clerk's office must be studied by the commissioner's office for the purpose of land transfers and taxation on intangibles. This particular branch of the commissioner's work has been assigned to me by Mr. Green for many years and I feel that this association with the work of the clerk of court has given me an insight into one of the most important duties, with which I am fully familiar and feel well qualified to handle to the satisfaction of the public."

The county board will meet at the courthouse tomorrow at 8 p. m. with officials of Falls Church and Col. J. A. Anderson, State public works administrator, to discuss plans for the installation of a sewerage system within the area of East Falls Church.

The Arlington County Bar Association, meeting yesterday afternoon at the courthouse, voted to hold its annual field day, banquet and dance June 21 at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

The program, under charge of a committee headed by Henry Klinge, will include golf, tennis, horseshoe throwing and cards. The meal will be served at 6:30 o'clock and will precede dancing.

All candidates for county offices have been invited to attend a meeting of the Barcroft School and Civic League Thursday night in the committee hall. Each candidate will be given an opportunity to present his platform.

The Parent-Teacher Association of John Marshall School will hold a tea for teachers of the school this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Percy Sherwood, Golf Club Manor.

John Lyon Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will meet tonight in the Moose Hall, Clarendon. After the session the post, assisted by the Ladies Auxiliary, will give a public bingo party.

Neighbor Sues Woman Grocer For $50,000, Charging Slander

Trade Rivalry Involved in Row Over Beer Sales at Silver Spring.

Alleging slander, Fred M. Marquette, proprietor of a delicatessen store at Montgomery Hills, Silver Spring, Md., yesterday filed suit for damages of $50,000 against Mrs. Etta Rosin, who operates a grocery store next door to him.

Marquette alleges that Mrs. Rosin made serious charges regarding his conduct of the store, especially with reference to sale of beer. He charges that before the Montgomery County liquor control board hearing May 17 she charged verbally that "Marquette keeps a disreputable and disorderly place" and that "his store is not a fit place for decent and respectable persons to patronize" and asks $50,000 damages for these remarks.

The delicatessen proprietor further alleges that Mrs. Rosin also declared "that Marquette permits carousing, excessive drinking, boisterous noises and profanity on his premises until 3 a. m. on Saturday and Sunday" and for this remark he asks an additional $25,000.

Marquette declares he never has been convicted of a crime and has enjoyed an excellent reputation in the neighborhood in which he resided until alleged remarks by Mrs. Ros

Prince Georges 15 Policemen, Clerk Selected

11 Regulars Reappointed; New Men Will Take Oaths Soon.

Prince Georges County's 11 policemen, most of whom have served since the organization of the force in 1931, yesterday were reappointed for another two years.

Democratic leaders and county commissioners, meeting jointly at Upper Marlboro, also appointed four additional men and one desk clerk authorized by recent legislative act.

Merson and Peake are both former county constables and have been active in Democratic circles in their respective neighborhoods. Dent, a farm foreman, on several occasions has assisted former Constable Harry Sweeney in the Piscataway district.

Hampton, 25, Youngest.

Maurice Hampton, who will be youngest member of the force, is only 25 years old. He is the son of John Hampton, Democratic leader in Seat Pleasant.

Bell, Brentwood chief of police for the last five years, is a member of the Chillum and Brentwood Democratic clubs. He also has been employed by a Washington electrical store.

The five new men were selected from a list of 50 applcants. The men reappointed are Chief J. J. Crowley, of Columbia Park; Sergt. Ralph Brown, Chillum, and Sergt. Arthur W. Hepburn, Brentwood.

Clerk to Serve as Jailer.

Perry Boswell, president of the board of commissioners, announced that Bell's job as desk clerk will be combined with that of jailer for the Hyattsville lockup, a position now held by George Wiseman, of that town.

Some of the reappointed regulars took their new oaths yesterday while the new men will be sworn in as soon as bond can be arranged by the clerk of court. This is expected within a few days. State's Attorney Alan Bowie said all the former policemen automatically would retain their police power until resworn.

According to the act passed by the recent session of the Legislature, the police chief is to receive a salary of $1,995 a year. In addition, he will receive $300 for upkeep of his automobile and $60 for uniforms.

Republicans Denied Beds of Democrats

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., June 3.—The Republican "grass rooters" won't rest their convention-weary heads in beds vacated by Democratic legislators after all, Speaker John P. Devine said today, thereby adding to the general headache of the arrangements staff for the Republican Midwestern rally here June 10 and 11.

The Republicans had counted heavily on the Democratic-controlled Legislature adjourning and releasing their hotel quarters, but the Republicans and Democrats in the Legislature are real mad at each other.

"Of course we won't adjourn next Monday and Tuesday," Devine said. "We have too much important legislation to be considered. Anyway, after the Republicans delayed us for weeks with their filibuster, why should we adjourn for them now?"

Gang Captured After Virginia Store Robbery

One Suspect Shot Down in Chase Near Stanley; Six Others Held.

By the Associated Press.

Luray, Va., June 3.—Seven persons were captured—one after a running gun fight—by officers in a search for the robbers of a store at Stanley last night.

Six of the young men and boys arrested were taken without trouble, but it was only after a 12-mile chase with bloodhounds and gunfire that the officers captured Lewis Smith, 26, who broke jail two weeks ago. Smith was shot in the back and neck. He was arraigned today on two charges of burglary and pleaded guilty to one of them, on which he will be tried Wednesday. Sheriff E. L. Lucas said Smith would be kept here until after the trial.

Others held include James Smith, 19; John Woodward, 18; Albert Woodward, 16, and a 10-year-old boy, all of Madison County.

Col. Woodcock Quits Survey; Wheels Stop Till Nice Acts

Governor Must Decide Whether Board Has Secretary or Manager.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 3.—The office of the State survey commission remained empty and locked today, awaiting a decision by Gov. Harry W. Nice as to whether it is to have a "secretary or manager."

The law creating the commission provided that the Governor make this decision, and until it is reached the office personnel can not be selected, it was indicated today.

The withdrawal of Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock as chairman of the commission has thrown an obstacle in its path until a new chairman can be selected. Woodcock, who is president of St. John's College, declined the appointment because he said he feared the job of investigating relief and State departments would interfere with his academic duties.

J. Cookman Boyd, commission member, said the office would be opened as soon as the Governor gives the word. Isaac Lobe Straus, the minority member, was expected to return from a trip to Virginia today, and Boyd expects to confer with him soon.

Minority Group Condemns Bill To Protect PWA

Measure to Validate Thirty Reclamation Projects Opposed in House.

By the Associated Press.

A minority report condemning the Johnson-Ford bill to validate more than 30 reclamation projects initiated by the Public Works Administration was filed yesterday in the House.

Serving notice that all farm organizations opposed the measure, five members of the Flood Control Committee stated in their report some of the projects "are economically and financially unsound." They contended the projects conflicted with the Administration's farm-land policy.

The legislation, growing out of the Supreme Court's ruling that Secretary Ickes lacked authority to undertake the Parker Dam in Arizona, was requested by the Administration to validate 33 projects on which the decision raised legal doubt.

Four Republicans Sign Report.

Four Republicans, Carlson, of Kansas; Kimball, of Michigan; Tobey, of New Hampshire, and Rich, of Pennsylvania, and Gehrmann (Progressive), Wisconsin, signed the report citing their objections as:

"Nationally our Department of Agriculture is taking out of production 35,000 to 38,000 acres of land annually, and this legislation will bring into production several millions of acres of arid lands and be contrary and ruinous to our present land policy."

Carlson said the projects "undertaken by Secretary Ickes without authority under the public works section of the recovery act will cost in excess of $500,000,000 if carried out."

The report assailed the Grand Coulee project on the Columbia River, saying that while $63,000,000 had been allocated, it was the intention of the reclamation service to spend $179,000,000.

Propose Authorization of Dam.

However, the group said they would propose authorization for Parker Dam, which is to be financed from the sale of Los Angeles bonds for water facilities. The State of Arizona contested the right of the Government to initiate the Parker Dam project and was upheld by the Supreme Court in April.

"We desire to go vigorously on record," the report said, "as opposing the authorization of any of the projects listed in this bill that deal primarily with the reclamation of land and power development. Should these reclamation projects be carried into completion it will destroy the fruit farmer and handicap the wheat and corn farmer of the Middle West. It is opposed by every farm organization, including the National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation and National Farmers Union. Its major beneficiaries will be the railroads, the land sharks and land boomers of the Western area."

Omaha, Nebr., June 3 (AP).—Former Congressman Edgar Howard, of Columbus, Nebr., famed for his long locks of hair, is angry.

He told about it today on his return from Washington. Howard went into a Washington barber shop for a hair trim and, like many another man, said he fell asleep.

While Howard slept the barber worked well—too well.

"I never got such a shock in my life as when I woke up and heard those scissors snipping dangerously near my ear. Why, the darn fool had cut one side of my hair almost as short as a boyish bob!

"Luckily, the other side was saved, but I'm a sight now with one side of my hair short and the other long," complained Howard.

Supreme Court Leaves Capitol After 75 Years

Justices Will Sit in New $10,000,000 Home When They Meet in October.

the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., of Baltimore.

Speaking for himself and Justices Louis D. Brandeis and Benjamin N. Cardozo, Justice Harlan F. Stone read a vigorous dissent to that decision, contending the court was embarking on uncharted waters in seeking to condemn methods of procedure instead of hewing to the line of what is or is not conuscatory and, therefore, constitutional.

Justice Willis Van Devanter, who has sat almost daily during the winter months in that room during the last 25 years—longer than any of his associates—read a brief decision in an injury case and sat back in his chair to gaze on the scene before him, perhaps to conjure up memories of all that had happened in the last quarter of a century.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, leaning with his arms on "the bench," took up the reading of decisions, one growing out of a dispute over oil lands, in which it was held the Interior Department had acted improperly, another dealing with an admiralty case, and a third concerning the injuries of a longshoreman.

Chief Justice Seems Gay.

The Chief Justice, so severe and grave a week ago, when he laid down the rules of law which struck a smashing blow at the New Deal, assumed a light, almost gay, tone in reading his last decision in the old chamber. The point at issue was whether State law or Federal law governed the case of a longshoreman, unloading a vessel lying in navigable waters, who was injured when he was struck by a hoist lifting cargo from a hatch and precipitated upon a wharf.

His eyes sparkling and with a bright smile, as though to say how simply fundamental such a case was for the Supreme Court, the Chief Justice explained the tribunal previously had ruled that when a longshoreman was struck by a crane on the dock and knocked into the water, the cause of action arose on land. Consequently, it followed, he said, that when the man is struck on the vessel and thrown on the dock, the cause of action arises on the vessel. His audience quietly laughed with him.

Without troubling to read them, Chief Justice Hughes asserted the routine orders of the court would be handed the clerk and he went on to announce appointment of a committee of eminent lawyers to advise the court in the preparation of a unified system of rules for procedure in cases in equity and at law in the Federal district courts.

74 Neophytes Introduced.

The court proceeded to receive motions for admission to the bar, 74 applicants being introduced one by one. Observing the scene was Frank Key Green, marshal of the court, who first came to it 45 years ago as a page boy. Administering the oath to those just admitted was Charles Elmore Cropley, the youthful appearing, always well-dressed clerk of the court, who also as a page boy first entered the court's portals 27 years ago. At his side was Reginald C. Dilli, deputy clerk, with 28 years' service.

During the lengthy proceedings of admitting new practitioners to its bar—similar to a graduation ceremony—the justices became restless, shifting about in their huge chairs. Justice Roberts read. Justice Brandeis stared at the marble busts of the Chief Justices who had presided over the Supreme Court, lining the semicircle wall before him. The Chief Justice, after each introduction, said, "Mr. Blank, you may pass to the clerk's desk," with the warmth he would greet a guest in his home.

Finally this chore was finished and the novices trooped out in a body to pay $15 each and receive their certificates. So far there had not been a word of reference to the decisions of a week ago. The justices appeared oblivious of the excitement and clamor their utterances had caused.

Then Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, arose and moved the court issue a stay of mandate of its decision declaring unconstitutional the Frazier-Lemke mortgage moratorium act until the case could be reargued in the fall. Almost curtly, the Chief Justice denied the motion and declined to answer further questions about the decision.

The hour had come for ending a momentous era in the history of the Supreme Court—one of unprecedented importance during the last eight months when the court upheld the Administration's gold program, but overruled in crushing manner its attempts to control industry by code, its efforts to relieve farmers of their debts and to give pensions to railway workers.

Throughout its history the Supreme Court has never indulged in sentimental reminiscing. Nor did Chief Justice Hughes. A nod of the head to indicate the court was finished was the only recognition he gave to the moment. It was a signal to Thomas Ennals Waggaman, the formally-garbed court crier, who immediately repeated the rote used in that chamber each spring for 75 years when the court adjourned its term.

"The honorable court is now adjourned to the time and place appointed by law," he said.

And School Is Out.

Instead of marching in a line from the court, as they usually do; the justices, like boys freed from their classrooms, strolled about, tucking back the billowy sleeves of their black gowns, shaking hands with clerks and various attaches, wishing them pleasant summer vacations and receiving in turn similar good wishes. One by one, the justices went for the last time to the quaint robing room across the Capitol corridor.

Within a few days all of the nine justices will be on farms, New England estates, in the mountains or on their way to Europe for the summer. The chief justice plans a tour of New England and Canada. Justice George Sutherland will enjoy Italian skies at Lake Como. Justice Stone plans to leave soon for Europe.

The lack of ceremony with which the Supreme Court departed from its chamber was in contrast to the elaborate program which marked the passage of the Senate from that room to its present hall on January 4, 1859. Then it was made an occasion for a review of the country's history.

The voice of the 72-year-old John Jordan Crittenden, the dean of the Senate, having served in that body for various periods since 1817, joined with that of the 38-year-old Vice President John Cabell Breckinridge, the youngest man ever to hold that office, to recall to mind the events that had given "a consecrated character to this hall."

Room Saw Early Dramas.

Senator Crittenden said none could leave the chamber without casting behind "many longing and lingering looks" as they recalled the questions of Constitution and law, of peace and war and empire, which had been debated and decided in that "grand theater" with such actors on the stage as Clay, Webster, Calhoun, Benton, Leigh and Wright.

Vice President Breckenridge eulogized "this admirable Constitution, which has survived peace and war, prosperity and adversity; this double scheme of government, State and Federal, so peculiar and so little understood by other powers, yet which protects the earnings of industry and makes the largest personal freedom compatible with public order."

"And now, Senators," he said in a speech which the Senate yesterday ordered printed as a public document, "we leave this memorable chamber, bearing with us unimpaired, the Constitution we received from our forefathers. Let us cherish it with grateful acknowledgments to the Divine Power who controls the destiny of empires and whose goodness we adore.

"The structures reared by men yield to the corroding tooth of time. These marble walls must molder into ruin, but the principles of constitutional liberty, guarded by wisdom and virtue, unlike material elements, do not decay. Let us devoutly trust that another Senate, in another age, shall bear to a new and larger chamber this Constitution, vigorous and inviolate, and that the last generation of posterity shall witness the deliberations of the representatives of American States still united, prosperous and free."

The Supreme Court, heirs on whom had been cast this great inheritance, reiterated the vigor and inviolability of that Constitution a week ago. There was nothing more to say yesterday.

Directed Verdict Denied Two in Conspiracy Trial

Los Angeles, June 3 (AP).—A motion for an instructed verdict of acquittal was denied by Judge Walter J. Desmond today in the trial of Vilma Aknay and Sari Fedak, Hungarian actresses, charged with conspiracy to maintain a false $250,000 breach of promise action against Ernest Vadja, playwright.

Harry F. Sewell, attorney for the defendants, argued the prosecution had failed to show any public offense had been committed by the actresses.

The breach-of-promise suit was dismissed.

Men, being men, can not tell you very much about women. For instance, to the young-man-in-love the opposite sex is all sweetness and light; the bachelor, who has dodged the ladies for years, believes them to be scheming minxes, and the married man is probably afraid to tell you what he really thinks.

Therefore, to get a true opinion of women, you must go to a woman for your information . . . and so we've gone to Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of The Washington Post's woman's pages, to find out about those lovely and sometimes sweet creatures who do so much to make our lives happy and miserable. And Miss Lindsay certainly tells us, and all other readers of The Post, about "The Gentle Sex." You'll find her impressions of her sisters . . . and brothers, too . . . in The Post each Sunday morning to entertain . . . and educate you. Each week she writes this amusing, intelligent column which so satirically punctures so many of our illusions, and which gives us an insight into the devious ways of women.

For example, she outlines the character of Tactful Tillie, who never comes right out and tells her friends they are getting fat. Oh, no! Tactful Tillie merely sniffs, "Are'nt you getting a bit stout, dearie?" Tactful Tillie, Miss Lindsay also reveals, prides herself on being able to find out disagreeable things by a method which is practically painless . . . to her.

Or Miss Lindsay describes the conversation at the Sunday dinner table; and her description is as true to life as the family laundry line. You can recognize Uncle Henry, who wants to talk politics, and Aunt Susan, who simply must tell Cousin Mary about those perfectly darling little needlepoint footstools she saw downtown for only $2.98, or, if you read carefully, you might recognize yourself!

We are sure that Miss Lindsay's sardonic humor will please you as much as it pleases us . . . we think it's one of the best features in The Sunday Post. Gently, oh, so very gently, the barb of her wit penetrates . . . but you're laughing so much you don't mind the sting.

"The Gentle Sex," which has become one of the best-liked columns in The Sunday Post, may be found each Sunday morning on the woman's pages of

King's Party Proves Gala Despite Rain

Capital Society Calls at the British Embassy Late in Evening.

Strawberries and Cream Served Along With Birthday Punch.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Members of Capital society knew several hours of indecision yesterday, for the Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay had issued cards for the annual garden party in celebration of the King's birthday, and the day dawned none too fair, with intermittent showers in the early afternoon.

Calls at the British Embassy were answered thus: "Yes, the garden party will take place if it does not rain." But at 4 o'clock the skies were still heavy and gray and there was nothing to do but wait until the last moment before 5 o'clock and then don one's best party frock and hat and present one's self at the door.

Luck was with the hosts, however, for it cleared for a time just between 5 and 6 o'clock and until 7 there was a general drifting of the several hundred guests from the marquees in the garden toward the wide steps leading indoors.

However, it was a brilliant sight and guests lingered long to converse, admire the rose garden, drink the King's health with refreshing punch, and eat the delicious strawberries with Devonshire cream, a typically British dish, and always served at the embassy on this annual occasion.

Lady Lindsay Wears Blue.

Lady Lindsay and her towering husband received the guests on the south front of the embassy, which commands a view of the city from its height on Massachusetts avenue. Lady Lindsay wore a gown of navy blue and beige printed chiffon, and a hat of navy blue straw.

On the wide terrace numerous guests gathered in groups to chat before going into the gardens, or even to sit in the wicker chairs for a conversation.

There was the Ambassador of Argentina with Senora de Espil, the latter wearing a frock of deep yellow shantung, the tunic of which was fastened with Chinese frogs of the same material and girdled with bright colors. Her hat was a large one of leghorn trimmed with brown ribbon. The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky, the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Munir, the Ambassador of Brazil and Senora de Aranha were among others seen.

Among the ministers and their wives were the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, the Minister of Iran and Mme. Djalal, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph W. Close, who will leave on Friday to spend the summer in England; the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt, and the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff.

With the latter was Mlle. Marie Petroff, who will sail tomorrow for her home in Sofia after spending several months visiting with her brother and sister-in-law. Mr. and Mrs. John Philip Hill will entertain at a luncheon in Baltimore tomorrow for Mlle. Petroff, and the party will later see her to her ship.

Bachelor Diplomats Present.

Two of the most popular of Washington's bachelor diplomats, the Minister of Rumania, Mr. Charles A. Davila, in smart gray flannels, and the new Minister of Greece, Mr. Demitros Sicillanos, in morning coat, were also present.

From the Cabinet were seen Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, in a black and white printed gown; Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, with her daughter, Mrs. Harry Baxter, in a beige crepe frock with a wide-brimmed brown hat, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture. Nearby were Associate Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, who will leave today to spend the summer at their country place, Bryncoyd Farms, near Valley Forge.

The former Vice President, Mr. Charles Curtis, was accompanied by his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, while not far away were the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, and still farther on Mr. Dwight F. Davis, one-time Secretary of War and former Governor General of the Philippines.

An interesting group of young girls included Miss Nella Veverka, in bright red dotted Swiss with a large red hat; the Senoritas Patterson and the Senoritas Trusco; Miss Valerie Prochnik, Miss Helen Wardman, Miss Annabel Essary and Miss Louise Claytor, all three in frocks of lilac with the same shade carried out in the flowers of their hats; Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, Mrs. F. Wilkinson Bunker with Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery, the latter dashing off to finish last-minute affairs before leaving for Chicago en route to the West Coast and thence to Honolulu for a visit of several months.

Mrs. Randolph Wears Crepe.

Others there were Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Mrs. Tracy Dows in gray and Mrs. Touxtun Beale in pale blue; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Owsley, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson and their two daughters, Miss Junia and Miss Jane Culbertson; Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. Sidney A. Cloman, Miss Anne Randolph, in a charming gown of trailing black chiffon with a large black hat, and Miss Mary Randolph in a printed crepe frock chatting with Mrs. John Philip Hill; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis glancing at Miss Hope Jackson's palm and promising to read it soon; Senator Arthur Capper, talking with Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose and Brig. Gen. William E. Horton; and Mr. Robert Jackson with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan.

Others there were Mrs. C. C. Clover, jr.; Miss Olivia Stokes, Judge and Mrs. Crawford Biggs, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, in a charming pink frock; Baron and Baroness von Pagenhardt, Mr. and Mrs. William Cushman, Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, in pale blue; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norment, Mrs. Oscar Underwood and Mrs. Edgar Snow.

Sale Offering Chance to Shop, Keep Budget

Buying Year's Supply of Toiletries Not Beyond Means in This Store.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF THIS TUESDAY, June 4, Anno Domini 1935, is remembered for nothing else in Washington it should be for the unusual toiletry sale going full strong in a downtown store. Here you're offered the chance of the year to stock up on a 12-month supply for your boudoir and your bathroom at prices below par.

The surest way to keep your budget from the breaking point and still buy lots of the nice things you need and want is to do a bit of wholesale shopping in this bargain spot today.

One of the most interesting buys in the lot has to do with perfume. You can buy a half-dram of your favorite fragrance at a price that will pleasantly astound you. Just a few of the outstanding half-dram offers include: Guerlain's L'Heure Bleue, 50 cents; Caron'r Bellodigia, 70 cents, and Nuit de Noel, 95 cents: Lanvins My Sin, 45 cents; Myons Exaltation, 75 cents; Lelongs' Mon Image, $1; Cotys Suma, 65 cents; Evening in Paris, 25 cents; D'Auvergne's Summer Night, 30 cents.

If you prefer more than a half-dram bottle, why not take advantage of Lubin's floral perfumes, ordinarily $4 for an ounce size, now only $1.95.

Equally enticing as any of these bargains, is the $1.50 box of bath powder, now 75 cents. The box itself is smart. It's an ornate China affair in pastel shades to match your bathroom or bedroom color scheme, and it's filled to the brim with fluffy fragrant gardenia dusting powder.

Bath crystals, reduced to 25 cents, come in gardenia, rose, pine, jasmine, carnation and lavender. They come in a generous sized package double wrapped in celophane. Don't forget how refreshing these dainty crystals will make your bath on a hot summer's day.

Solid wooden backed hairbrushes—rosewood, natural and black ebony—are reduced from $2 to 79 cents. Their extra fine bristles make them excellent for brushing your hair to health and beauty.

Six-piece dresser sets made of lustrous pearly like pyralin have been selling for ..6.95. Now they are $2 less. They include brush, comb, mirror, tray, puff box and file.

Hot Weather Panties.

When the weather's hot, you'll thank your lucky stars for pinpoint panties. They're extra fine mesh affairs, guaranteed cool as a cucumber.

Don't forget—keeping comfortable in Washington when midsummer comes is either a matter of turning the refrigerator into a refuge or wearing things that are especially cool. Start with pin-point panties. They're dainty little affairs, well fitting an' comfortable, and priced to meet a humble purse—2 pairs for $1.

They come in white or flesh, plain or lace trimmed, sizes 5, 6, 7.

Comfort for Loungers.

Negligees of Japanese pongee will allow you no end of lounging comfort. They, too, are cool and comfortable and modestly priced.

Coolie coats, as they're more often referred to, will serve you well as a beach robe, or a boudoir wrap. Those featured for 88 cents in a downtown store will take your fancy from the first. They come in gay Oriental motifs. Price, 88 cents.

New Playing Cards.

Easibid is the appropriate name of some new playing cards making their debut in a downtown store. A casual glance at these bridge helpers will tell you what to bid, for trick values are clearly listed on aces, kings and queens.

New comers to bridgedom will find them no end of real help. And others whose patience is so often tried by the slow and inaccurate bidding of the learners will be delighted at the way these cards speed up and steady the bid.

Two decks for 95 cents! Don't fail to see them.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Nerves at Breaking Point, Young Married Woman Seeks Advice.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a young married woman of 24 and have been married three years. I have been told I am an introvert and after reading a few psychology books I have decided my husband is an extrovert. My husband makes a good salary and we live comfortably and have no debts.

• • • •

My problem is this: When I want to go out occasionally for dinner, my husband says "no." I know he is the wiser and more practical-minded, but the effect such a refusal has on me is terrible. My disappointment is so great I sometimes get hysterical.

• • • •

Another thing is this: I belong to a bridge club. I suppose you would call the members lovely girls, well-read and well-behaved. But I notice if two of us happen to be discussing some picture we have seen, the others at the table will immediately start talking about some other one they have seen. If you can't attend a regular meeting, and don't call the hostess at least four days ahead of time, she insults you. Or if you make some remark, they immediately pick it up and use it—making it sound trite and absurd. I am becoming a nervous wreck.

• • • •

I am getting afraid to speak, afraid they will take things the wrong way. The only real pleasure I get is in going to the theater or to church. I have tried crocheting, but it makes me nervous. We have a two-room apartment and I know I don't do it justice, trying to hurry through the cleaning. My meals are a failure most of the time because of hurrying with them.

• • • •

I know I have much to be thankful for and that this is a very silly letter, but my growing fear and nervousness has caused me to come to you for help. I find myself answering remarks I don't like with sarcasm, which I know isn't right. Thanking you for any advice, I am, most sincerely. E. E. S.

Consult A Diagnostician.

DEAR E. E. S: It is quite obvious, even to yourself, that you are on the verge of a nervous collapse. This increasing nervous tension—manifesting itself in hysteria, irritability, unreasoning fear, distrust of your friends' good will, an uncontrollable tendency to rush through your housework—may have its source in some organic disorder, requiring medical or surgical treatment, or it may be the outgrowth of emotional frustration, proceeding from some spiritual or physical maladjustment in the marriage relationship. Or it might be a combination of both, dovetailing into a vicious circle, each aggravating and intensifying the other.

• • • •

My advice is: Consult the best diagnostician you can find or afford; get an authoritative, scientific pronouncement as to the nature of the basic disorder, and take recommended steps to heal yourself.

• • • •

Since I can not specify such a diagnostician through this column, I suggest you contact Miss Beulah Smith, Adams 7979, director of the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1410 Columbia road, unless you already have a wholly competent family physician who can be relied upon to go thoroughly into your case. Miss Smith's office hours are 1:30 to 4:30 p. m. from Mondays through to Fridays, and the clinic she directs was organized to help persons solve just such problems as yours. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Toil-Worn Farm Woman Vanishing, Home Demonstration Leader Asserts

The welfare of the rural woman, better management of her home and adequate diet of her children are just a few of the points which Miss Hilda Faust (left), State nutrition specialist of California, and Miss Alice L. Wheeler (right), president of the New York State Home Demonstration Agent Association, found to discuss when they met recently in Washington.

What TODAY Means

"Gemini."

IF JUNE 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until midnight.

Be careful you do not let any feeling of a harbored resentment influence any of your actions on this date. Any form of antagonism, that is evidenced by a biased opinion beng expressed will probably form a basis for trouble. Commercial activities will possibly evolve around strong personalities today, so it will pay to display firmness, as well as strength of character in all your business undertakings. In social activities any display of snobbishness or intentional slights to any at a friendly gathering are likely to prove a great mistake.

If a woman, and June 4 is your birthday, a sympathetic nature may incline you to be too generous for your own good. It might be well to remember "charity" begins at home." Your faith in your own ability will enable you to succeed in whatever you undertake. Having plenty of enthusiasm, you have the power to inspire others with it.

The child born on June 4, generally, when it passes from childhood into youth, requires that its versatility be carefully guided into one definite channel. Be careful it does not become "a Jack-of-all-trades and a master of none."

If a man and June 4 is your natal day, your ability to overcome discouragement, combined with an unusual amount of energy, as well as practical sense, will enable you to forge steadily ahead if you will continue to keep a stiff upper-lip.

Easier Domestic Management Taught to 24,000 in Rural New York, Mrs. Wheeler Reveals; Similar Program in California.

TIMES have changed down on the farm, and so has the farmer's wife. She no longer rises at dawn and slaves till dusk, plans her meals with three meats and six vegetables and orders her Sunday frock by a catalogue.

This toilworn woman of the past has been supplanted by the wife who has home management down to a science, who understands the care and feeding of children and who takes pride in a smart appearance and an attractive home.

Not that this change took place overnight, or even in a month or a year. Mrs. Alice L. Wheeler, president of the New York State Home Demonstration Agent Association, visiting in Washington this week, took time out yesterday to discuss the slow and often difficult steps by which these transformations were brought about.

Her State is divided into sections each with the home bureau agent, whose duties are to seek out rural women who are eager to learn modern methods of management. Once these women are taught, they in turn pass on their knowledge to others in the community.

Look for Leadership.

"The first step toward spreading modern knowledge of efficient home management," said Mrs. Wheeler, "always lies in selecting or finding women in the communities who are able to lead their friends. We try to develop this ability for leadership. These women then carry on teaching their neighbors."

She pointed out that finding farmer's wives who are eager to learn and would appreciate the value of better balanced diets and improved preparation and service was not difficult.

"Only those who want to learn seek the home agent," she explained. "Others who stay away and who must be reached by the rural leaders are the difficult ones. They do not want to try new methods of management at first. They have to be literally shown every advantageous point."

Among the modern subjects taught by the home agent are:

1. How to reduce unnecessary labor and how to manage efficiently.
2. Planning of meals, preparing and serving them.
3. Child and pre-natal care.
4. Making and selection of clothes as well as remodeling them.
5. How to bring convenience, comfort and beauty in the home.

21,000 Study in New York.

"In New York we have 21,000 farm wives who are busy learning and handing on to others the knowledge of improvements they acquire at the home bureau unit," said Mrs. Wheeler.

"It naturally is very gratifying to see how the sowing of seeds is bringing about such results."

Another visitor to the city who is interested in improving conditions in rural homes, is Miss Hilda Faust, State nutrition specialist of California.

"On the Coast we are particularly urging rural families to have their own milk and vegetable supply," she said. "So many farms there raise only one crop, that it is astounding how few have any of the supplies they actually need. By teaching the women more about proper foods and the actual nutrition requirements of both adults and children, we interest them in cultivating their own vegetables and in having a milk supply.

Another important subject prestress among the farm women," continued Miss Faust, "is fitting nutrition into farm finances; in other words, adequate diet, in terms of money. This includes three branches—food production, food preservation and purchasing proper foods."

Another important subject presented to women in rural areas, she said, is food for special ages and conditions.

"We try to explain to them what types of food babies should have, and also the requirements for adolescents. And, of course, we stress diets for young mothers. In fact," she added, "lately we have been teaching—and it's gone over big!—diets for weight control."

Cutter Warns Against Infatile Paralysis

Summer Is Time to Be on the Alert Against Dread Disease.

Early Symptoms Are Like Botulinus or Diphtheria.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WITH the coming of the summer months we must be on the alert relative to the recognition and prompt quarantine of poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis). In many respects the toxin of the disease is somewhat similar to that of poisoning from the botulinus bacillus or the diphtheria organism. All three attack nervous tissue. "Polio" is caused by an organism that can not be seen under the microscope, hence the active agent is known as a filterable virus.

Modern investigation has shown that infection reaches the brain and then the spinal cord along a route the first station of which lies in the nasal passages. Tiny filaments of the nerves of smell (olfactory nerves) pick up the virus and pass it along through the midbrain to the spinal cord.

Paralysis does not always follow every infection of the nasal passages, and there is a mass of evidence to indicate that thousands of individuals experience no ill effects from the presence and activity of the virus. Many persons no doubt have acquired an active immunity.

In other cases however, definite symptoms appear, most commonly in children between the ages of 2 and 5. There is a wide variance in the response to the infection, based upon its virulence, the amount of virus absorbed, and the physical condition of the child.

Once the virus gains entrance to the nervous system the battle is on. Although the disease may appear quickly in some patients, it is generally thought that from seven to ten days must elapse between the nasal infection and the appearance of symptoms. Unfortunately some cases prove fatal and in these there is an overwhelming involvement of the spinal cord and sometimes of the brain.

Adults are not entirely immune, although the number attacked is relatively small. Whenever an epidemic occurs it is important to remember that although a large number of individuals may harbor the virus and be ill for a few days only a small percentage will show the symptoms of paralysis. Closing schools, unless children are confined to their homes, is of doubtful value.

The control of poliomyelitis depends upon strict isolation and quarantine of all suspicious cases. Inasmuch as the virus can be found in the washings from the nose and throat, it is important that nasal inflammation in any form be avoided. Gargles or nasal irrigations, if used, should consist only of oxidizing agents such as hydrogen peroxide, potassium permanganate (dilute solution), or sodium perborate. Once the disease has been recognized, rest in bed and the use of a soft bland diet are of importance. The experienced physician will probably drain the spinal canal if signs of increased pressure of the spinal fluid are apparent.

The use of convalescent serum, recommended by Netter in 1911, has not been followed by uniformly favorable results. Nevertheless, in an epidemic that occurred in 1931 the results following the use of serum therapy showed that in untreated cases the percentage of fatalities was about 12, whereas in treated cases only 2 per cent succumbed.

Tht recent work of John A. Kolmer, of Philadelphia, and Maurice Brodie, of New York, is most suggestive, and it appears quite probable that vaccination against this disease is now within our grasp. Even though vaccination with dried infected spinal cord matter is in the experimental stage, it should be resorted to with well children in the presence of an epidemic.

Women's Unit Hears Parking Abuses Flayed

Europe Bans Autos From Streets at Night, Drivers Told.

THE AMERICAN practice of overnight parking on city streets and lengthy parking in congested districts is not countenanced in leading European cities, Mrs. Wilbur Carr told members of the Women's Safety Committee of the District of Columbia Motor Club at the monthly meeting at the Sulgrave Club yesterday morning.

Mrs. Carr, who spoke on "European Traffic and Its Control," had written traffic directors in leading European cities asking how they solved certain traffic problems. Her report was compiled from their answers. The committee hopes some of the methods employed in Europe may help solve traffic problems in the District of Columbia.

"In almost no European city are cars left on the streets all night," Mrs. Carr said. "And in most cities, as in London, all parking is restricted to two hours. Such a regulation in the District would necessitate garages that would rent at a reasonable rate to Government employes, who can not pay large rent. But it would relieve much of the traffic congestion."

The introduction of "Green Cap Men," similar to those employed in most cities in the British Isles, also was suggested by Mrs. Carr. These men aid motorists in parking their cars, and prevent confusion, she said.

"The French custom of parking on the side of the street with even numbers on even days of the month, and on the side with odd numbers on odd days of the month has been successful in preventing double parking in Paris," Leo J. Keena, United States Minister to Honduras, and former United States Consul General in Paris, told members of the committee. "This custom prevents the unfairness, which often results to merchants when cars are parked only on one side of the street," he said.

Inspector A. D. Lamb of the District of Columbia Traffic Department discussed enforcement of the new safety regulation proposed by the committee, and accepted by the District Traffic Department.

This regulation forbids the parking of cars within 45 feet of busy intersections. The committee also adopted a resolution asking for two new traffic officers; one to be stationed at the intersection of Connecticut avenue and Columbia road, and the other at the end of Taft Bridge. Inspector Lamb agreed that these officers were necessary.

Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the committee, presided and introduced the speakers. The Minister to Honduras and Mrs. Keena were honor guests at the luncheon which followed the meeting.

Fruit Sandwich Delicious For the Summer Buffet

PORCH PARTY REFRESHMENTS.

• • • •

Pickles Olives
Jellied chicken loaf
Fruit sandwich salad with Strawberry mayonnaise.
Coffee Nuts Mints Punch

By Dorothea Duncan.

IT LOOKS LIKE a slice of ribbon cake, but it answers to the name of fruit sandwich loaf. It is the old sandwich loaf made of four lengthwise slices of white bread, spread in alternate layers with three delicious fruit fillings, and topped off generously with creamy cheese. It has been created especially with summer buffet menus in mind, for it can be served as a sandwich or as a salad garnished with strawberry mayonnaise and fresh sweet cherries.

Fruit-Nut Filling.

1 cup dried figs
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped nut meats
1½ cups water
3 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup dates, ground
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Cook figs in water 5 minutes, or until softened. Drain, place 1 cup of liquid from figs in top of double boiler, bring to boil. Add dry ingredients, bring to brisk boil, stirring constantly. Place over rapidly boiling water, cook 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Grind figs; add with remaining ingredients to tapioca. Cool, for mixture thickens as it cools. Makes 2½ cups filling.

Strawberry Filling.

¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup fresh strawberries, hulled and sliced
2 tablespoons confectioner's sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup whipped cream

To mayonnaise add strawberries, sugar and lemon juice and fold into whipped cream. Makes 1 cup.

Minted Pineapple and Cream Cheese Filling.

1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese
1 tablespoon pineapple juice
Green food coloring
1 tablespoon chopped mint leaves
¼ cup drained, crushed, canned pineapple

Mash cheese to spreading consistency with pineapple juice, add chopped mint leaves and crushed pineapple. Color to desired tint with green coloring.

Remove crusts from one small loaf day-old sandwich bread. Cut lengthwise into four even slices. Spread first slice with softened butter and minted pineapple cream cheese spread. Cover with second slice of buttered bread. Butter top of second slice and spread with fruit-nut filling, covering with third slice of buttered bread. Top third slice with a generous coating of butter so that strawberry filling will not soak into the bread. Cover with fourth slice which has been generously buttered.

Place sandwich loaf on a large serving platter and spread as you would a cake with cream cheese frosting. Soften three packages of cream cheese with 1 tablespoon pineapple juice and 1 teaspoon of lemon juice. The top of the loaf may be decorated with tinted cheese which has been applied with a pastry tube. Chill in refrigerator for four hours before serving.

To serve, decorate platter with crisp watercress and fresh cherries, stems on, or cut in slices, serving each slice in a nest of lettuce. Garnish with additional strawberry mayonnaise and fresh red cherries.

The Game of Life

By Priscilla Wayne.

"PROVE it to me," Ellen said. Marjorie leaned closer to the other girl.

"Ellen, where is your engagement ring?"

"I left it in its case—in my dressing table—at home."

"Michael's home?"

"Yes."

"But he has sold his house?"

"I don't believe so. His mother told me that it was just—closed."

"It has been—just closed," Marjorie lied. "I saw it only the other day. Michael took me through it—asked me what changes I wanted made in it."

"I don't believe it. I don't believe it," but Ellen held close to the edge of her chair for support. She wondered if the other girl could hear the pounding of her heart.

"Would you believe it if I told you that Michael gave me your engagement ring?"

Something sweet and tender was slowly dying in Ellen's heart "Show me the ring."

She Had the Ring.

"Right here," Marjorie said, reaching swiftly into the bosom of her dress to take out a tiny case. "I took it off before I came in here. I didn't want to hurt your feelings. I didn't mean to show you that he gave it to me. But I guess I must prove what I'm saying is true."

She took the ring out of the box—slipped it on her finger.

There was no mistake. The set, a great glowing ruby of real value, had belonged to Michael's grandmother and his mother had given it to Michael as a present to his bride. Flanked by two lovely little diamonds, held in a hand tooled setting of platinum, it had been Ellen's prized possession since the day Michael had given it to her. Only sentiment—that it was a family heirloom—had caused her to leave it behind on the day she left Michael Dale's home forever.

To File Suit.

Ellen pushed her chair back. "I'm going, Marjorie. Tell Michael I'll file suit tomorrow. He'll soon be free, free as air."

And Ellen left the place. She had failed. The other woman had won, after all.

A fine gray drizzle, rapidly freezing into sleet, filled the bleak December night as Ellen turned toward her mother's new home. She did not call a taxicab. She wanted to walk—to feel the wet cold drizzle against her face.

The weather matched her mood. Late November meant the death of warmth and sunshine. That conversation with Marjorie had meant the death of love to Ellen.

Her path lay directly past the little house—bleak and lonely it seemed—that house of their love. She stood there, in the drizzle, leaning against the picket fence.

Still Had Key.

There they had come in the dawning of their married life. That dawn—that had faded so soon.

Almost instinctively Ellen opened her bag—felt in its depths. She had always kept the key to the little house in a side pocket of her purse. She could always find it easily there. She recalled how Michael had laughed, tenderly, at the way she stuffed papers into her pocketbook—said that she made of it a briefcase and not just a purse.

Her groping fingers came in contact with the key—yes, the key to the four walls that had once been Paradise.

Led by an impulse that she could not resist she turned in at the little gate. Why not? What harm would it do? Just to go inside, wander again through the dear, deserted rooms, stand once more in prayer before a tiny, empty crib.

Fire Was Burning.

She crossed the flagstone stoop slowly. Tomorrow, perhaps, it would be covered with white, white snow and even the marks of her feet would be obliterated, just as Marjorie would soon blot away forever any touch of hers that had ever molded the little house into a home.

She fitted the key with skilled, accustomed hands into the lock, the door swung open at her touch. She entered, closed the door slowly, and softly behind her.

Now through the narrow hall. She needed no light. Why she knew every inch, every crevice of the little house—through the blackest midnight she could find her way there.

She opened the door of the living room.

Was it a dream? A dying wood fire burned low on the hearth, a big chair was drawn close to it—just as in the old days—and a man sat in the chair—

Michael Was There.

She brushed her hand across her eyes. Could she be dreaming? Was it just the dear, dead ghost of a happier evening?

Michael spoke. He said just four words—they sang like music through her brain—"Dear, you've come home."

He reached out his arms toward her—and like a homing bird, Ellen went to him, stumbled to her knees by the great chair, hid her face in the cushions at his side.

"Ellen, Ellen, you've come back to me?" Oh, there couldn't be any mistaking the love and happiness that rang in his voice. She lifted her eyes. To search his face. To know if the message her heart kept pounding could be true—a delirious, joyous, God given message of happiness.

"You want me, Michael?"

Still Loved Her.

"Oh, Ellen, dear, I want you more than anything on earth. I'll never let you go again. Never, Ellen."

And there they were in each other's arms, heart to heart, and lips to lips—and the awful gulf of misunderstanding was breaking down, crumbling before their love in just that one blinding moment of truth.

After a while they talked it over, sitting very close before the fire that Michael had built up again and holding very tightly to each other as though the magic of the night, turning bitter, might snatch them from each other again.

Haltingly, brokenly, ashamed that she had ever doubted the man she loved, Ellen told about the ring.

The Real Explanation.

"I took it downtown last week, dear," Mike explained slowly. "I had it in the safe at the office. I saw it there yesterday. You know I haven't been here at the house much—I—I couldn't quite bear to come alone but I've been here today. I had a bad cold. Dr. John sentenced me to a day in bed. He just left a while ago. Checking up on me."

Ellen was beginning to understand. "And Marjorie had been working down at the office."

"In Mary Tuttle's place. I didn't like it very well, Ellen, but Marjorie is a cousin of Mary's and a cousin of Langhan's, too. Langhan has the hiring in the office. Marjorie must have taken the ring from the safe."

"And you don't love her, Mike?"—and then quickly, "I'm sorry, dear, I know that you don't. Nothing will ever make me doubt you again. I don't want to hear any more about Marjorie. I'm just sorry for her, that's all."

Just the Beginning.

"But I want to tell you, dear. Nothing must ever come between us again. I felt sorry for her, Ellen. She kept coming to see me. Only a couple of weeks ago she came back to the office after I thought everyone had gone home. I had to take her home. I had to tell her that night, Ellen—that I never wanted to talk to her again."

"Was it a rainy, cold night, Michael?"

"Yes."

"I saw you from the hotel window," Ellen whispered, safe in the shelter of his arms. "I thought my heart would break. But now let's forget—the things we want to forget. Let's just remember that we love each other, that life stretches ahead—our love story is just in the beginning."

Still With Them.

From an inner pocket Michael took a small leather box. Opened it slowly. There, like a jewel in its somber setting was a wee white shoe—just a pudgy soft shoe so familiar, so dear, that it seemed even yet to bear the print of a tiny, rosy foot.

"One chapter of our story has been written, dear," Michael said, the unashamed tears streaming from his eyes. "We have closed the book on the chapter—"

"No we haven't, Michael! No we haven't," Ellen said, and her smile was that of a tender Madonna—"we haven't closed the book, we haven't closed the chapter. Little Michael will be with us—all the days of our life—blessed by God to be our little boy forever."

Night Was Symbol.

"Don't you see, Michael dear, don't you see? There'll be brothers and sisters—strong, sturdy boys and girls and we'll love them and teach them and they'll grow up and go out of our lives into lives of their own. But little Michael—our baby—oh, thank God we can keep him forever in our hearts."

The great log Mike had placed on the fire sputtered, flamed into a sudden, bright glow—with their arms around each other the two who loved each other sat together there inside the four walls that had been hallowed by life and by death into a home.

And the flaming light seemed a symbol of the burning light of love that would guide them safely on into the noon day and through the lengthening shadows, beyond.

Culbertson On Bridge

1431.

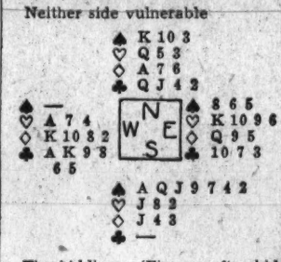
Forty-Nine States.

MY friend, Walter Malowan, one of the country's ranking players, and a past national champion, is noted for his skillful and resourceful play of notrump contracts. In order to prove that he is equally clever at playing his hand when there is a trump suit, today I am going to recount one of Mr. Malowan's triumphs. The hand was played in an expert game at Crockford's Club in New York.

Declarer's ruse works.

To return to the bridge hand. West, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	North	East	South
1♠	Pass (1)	1NT	2♠
3♣	Dbl. (2)	Pass	3♣ (3)
Pass	4♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—Since North was not vulnerable, he might have overcalled with one notrump. The pass is at least as good, however, and is safer.

2—North's hand can almost be counted on to win four tricks. South's overcall should add two more. It therefore seems that the contract should be defeated 300 points or more.

3—Since the two-spade overcall had not shown such freak distribution as South actually had, he thought it wiser to take the double out. This was correct and a glance at the hands will show that three clubs could have been made.

The Play.

Malowan held the South cards and was the declarer at four spades. West opened the King of clubs which Malowan ruffed. He now led a spade to dummy's ten and played the Queen of clubs. This he did not ruff, for he planned to discard one of his losers on this and one later, on the club Jack, thus giving up one trick in exchange for two. When he discarded on the club Queen, Malowan used a clever ruse which successfully led the defense astray. Instead of discarding a diamand, he threw the eight of hearts. Now when West took the club Ace he feared that unless he used haste Malowan would discard all of his losinghearts. For this reason West laid down the Ace of hearts and followed it with a low heart. This established the Queen of hearts in dummy and later Malowan was able to discard one of his losing diamonds on the Jack of clubs and the other on the Queen of hearts. He lost only three tricks and made four spades.

If Malowan had been content merely to get rid of his two diamond losers, he would have been set, for in leading hearts himself he could not have developed a trick.

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office

By Morgan Baker.

HAVING completed arrangements to speed and facilitate voting, District Young Democrats of America are prepared for a record balloting tonight at the Willard Hotel, when the officers of that organization will be selected in a run-off election.

BAKER.

Balloting will be permitted from 4 p. m. until 8 p. m., Gene Kaiser, FHA, campaign manager for the ticket headed by Paul Best, announced last night. Only registered members with dues paid may vote, according to the regulations, Mr. Kaiser warned.

Officers will be selected from two groups, the one headed by Best, of FHA, and the other by J. R. Nunan, of PWA. The third candidate in the primary, Edward J. Sheridan, has withdrawn, he stated.

The Best ticket is composed of Howard Stafford, NRA, first vice president; Nancy Harfield, Rural Electrification Unit, second vice president; Gladys Goeringer, FHA, recording secretary; Alva Patten, RFC, chairman, District Affairs, and John Bracken, Justice, chairman, resolutions. The treasurer and chairman of membership were named at the first election last week.

If elected, Mr. Best announced he would adhere strictly to the following platform:

"1. Leadership based on my own initiative and integrity, and a promise not to be dictated to by any individual or any group.

"2. Equal constitutional right for all—favoritism for none.

"3. Strict adherence to the constitution and parliamentary procedure.

"4. Current maintenance of all club records and membership lists for the convenience of all members.

"5. Complete audit of all books and records of the club upon taking office.

"6. Five thousand members by 1936.

Patents Granted.

Among patents of military, agricultural, or commercial importance just granted to Government employes are:

To George A. Graham (F) and George O. Tapper (F), War, for a telephone handset switch, mounted in the handle of a gooseneck telephone instrument and particularly useful for train dispatching systems.

To Charles A. Bennett and George E. Gaus (P), Agriculture, for a fractioning device to separate foreign matter from seed cotton by directing a stream of air under pressure into the cotton mass, which air blows the foreign matter against screens with mesh of various sizes.

Having returned from several weeks' vacation abroad, Tom Shaw, reading room, Library of Congress, has resumed his duties. While in London, Shaw attended the jubilee celebrations.

Turns Bee Fighter.

Ray Manning, Library of Congress, has turned bee fighter. A swarm of bees, 6 to 8 feet in diameter, called at his home, and Manning donned raincoat, galoshes, rubber gloves and scarf, and with the aid of the garden hose and the neighbors persuaded the bees to move on.

Miss Mary Bagwell, Treasury, has taken a cottage for the summer at Bay Ridge.

To Discuss CCC Camps.

Integration of the various services operating CCC camps will be the main topic of discussion at a meeting of CCC educational advisers at 2 p. m. today in 903 Hurley-Wright Building. Dr. John Studebaker, head of the office of education, will be the principal speaker. Other Washington men who will be present include Dr. H. C. Bryant, Park Service; J. G. Lindley, Soil Conservation Service; and Arthur Ringland, Forest Service.

600 Arrests Made.

Six hundred arrests have been made this year on the Capitol Grounds, according to Capt. William S. Orthman, Capitol police. This was disclosed in the subcommittee hearings on the appropriations bill in connection with Orthman's request for 24 additional privates on the Capitol force.

Sam Gilstrap, formerly with the Oklahoma City office, FERA, has been transferred to Washington as a traveling auditor.

Cooling Systems Urged.

Air-cooling systems for museums and other public buildings in Washington are urged by "Ardent Observer" (P), to attract more visitors and add to the enjoyment of these wonderful structures. "A. O." says:

"Public funds could be well expended in the air-cooling ventilation of our museums. These vast storehouses of knowledge are visited by citizens from the several States and from other shores. The trips are made by students in vacation times, when the climate is very hot and enervating. To have air-cooling in our museums would create an atmosphere of comfort and invite the young and old to enjoy the culture and education our museums afford. The same principle applies to our vast Library of Congress. The installation of ventilation in these edifices would be a great comfort to all visitors. Expenditure along these lines would result in enduring benefit."

Diary Guest Tickets.

Shenandoah Park's Completion Held Up By Appeal to Court

High Tribunal Agrees to Review Decision on Condemnation.

Land Owner Is Fighting Transfer of Land to Government.

By the Associated Press.

The Virginia Conservation and Development Commission yesterday lost in the Supreme Court the first phase of its Shenandoah Park case.

The court consented to review a decision holding the commission had valid authority to take park land through condemnation proceedings.

By its consent yesterday the court will hear an appeal by Robert H. Via, a park landowner, who contended it was beyond the power of Virginia to condemn land for the purpose of giving it to the Federal Government. He asserted such action would be in violation of his constitutional rights under the fourteenth amendment.

Conservation Commissioner Wilbur C. Hall, who was here yesterday, said the "commission had hoped the court would dismiss the case on jurisdiction grounds." In that event, he said, "the State would have transferred the park to the Federal Government immediately."

Originally Via, in a State court, sought to prevent the commission from proceeding, contending its authority from the State Legislature was unconstitutional. The case later was transferred to a western Virginia District Federal Court. Here three Federal judges dismissed the bill of complaint. From this decision Via appealed to the Supreme Court.

The State has been moving under an act of Congress authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to accept donations of land in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia to be used in creating the Shenandoah National Park. In 1926 the Virginia General Assembly authorized the Conservation and Development Commission to acquire the land by condemnation proceedings and convey it to the Federal Government for national park purposes.

Two Days in Creek, Aged Man Rescued

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 3.—Ernest Miller, 69-year-old hitch-hiker, who told police that he had been partially immersed in Massaponax Run, 6 miles south of here, for two days, was rescued this afternoon by Alex Thackers, a fisherman, and brought to Mary Washington Hospital, where he lay near death.

The aged transient, suffering from hunger and exposure to the waters of the run, said he was a native of Germany, but had no place to call home in America. Miller, police said, had been camping beside the run and was attempting to drink from the creek when he lost his balance and fell in. He clutched the thick underbrush that grew beside the stream, but was too weak to pull himself from the water.

How he had clung to the bushes for two days without letting loose puzzled police.

Public Affairs Group to Talk Over New Deal

Discussion of Constitution Added to Program at University.

By the Associated Press.

University, Va., June 3.—"The Constitution and the New Deal" is to be the subject of a round table discussion which has been added to the program of the ninth Institute of Public Affairs, which begins at the University of Virginia on June 30.

Because the issue of the Constitution and the Roosevelt Administration has almost overnight become one of the most important problems before the American people, Dr. Charles G. Maphis, director of the institute, believes that this discussion group will attract Nation-wide attention.

Demarest Lloyd, editor and publisher of Affairs and former European and Washington correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, has been secured as leader of this round table, which will meet during the second week of the Institute, beginning July 8.

Dr. Maphis is not ready to announce the speakers who will appear before this discussion group further than to say that the Liberty League has agreed to send six representatives, one to speak each day in explaining its stand on various issues.

The Administration is being invited to have men on the program who will express the policies of the New Deal. It is the hope of Dr. Maphis to have all the important points of view of every section of popular opinion presented for discussion.

"Considering the possible effects upon the economic welfare of the people the issue between the Supreme Court and its stand on the Constitution on one hand, and the President and New Deal policies on the other, may turn out to be the most important before the American Nation since the breakdown of the Articles of Confederation brought the Nation and its Constitution into being," Dr. Maphis said.

"It is our hope that this issue may be considered by the Institute in a non-partisan manner with a view to clarifying the public mind. We plan to have all the points of view on the problem presented by men and women who are qualified to speak," he added.

Reports in Covington Remove Strike Fear

Covington, Va., June 3 (AP).—"Unofficial" reports from Cleveland today said that "a successful settlement" of negotiations now being carried on by officials of the Industrial Rayon Corporation and a committee from Covington Local No. 2214, United Textile Workers of America, appeared likely.

Such a settlement would remove threat of a strike which the local has voted to call in the company's Covington plant unless demands are met. A committee of union leaders went to the company's office at Cleveland last Wednesday to present their demands.

NRA Parley Abandoned By Gov. Nice

N. Y. Executive Refuses Plea to Head Action by States.

May Discuss Matter at Regular Session in Biloxi.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 3.—Gov. Harry W. Nice tonight gave up his idea of an immediate conference of the 48 governors to consider some action on the situation resulting from the Supreme Court's decision wiping out the NRA codes.

Nice had suggested that Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York call such a meeting, and his immediate reason for abandoning the proposal was a message from Lehman terming such a move "inadvisable" and declining to summon the gathering.

The Maryland executive said that now, unless President Roosevelt called the governors to meet, the matter would have to wait until the annual governors' conference at Biloxi, Miss., June 13-15.

Cables From Bermuda.

Cabling from Bermuda, where he is on a vacation, Gov. Lehman said he "carefully considered" Gov. Nice's suggestion.

"As you know," he continued, "the Congress has been four months considering legislation along broad lines of national recovery. The Congress is still in session and it is not possible to know what definite action, if any, it may take.

"Under all circumstances it seems inadvisable for me to call a special conference of the 48 governors at the present time."

Nice, who had telegraphed his suggestion to all the other governors, said his purpose had been to be "helpful."

Governors Favored Parley.

He commented that "nearly all the governors seemed to favor such a conference," but were inclined to wait for the Biloxi conference.

"With Gov. Lehman's reply in mind, and with the Biloxi conference only a short while off," he said, "I think the matter of an immediate meeting can well be left to the President. If he thinks it desirable, he can call the meeting."

Husband Quits Mayoralty Race, 'Hasn't a Chance Against Wife'

By the Associated Press.

Glenville, W. Va., June 3.—Glenville's spirited mayoralty election campaign wound up tonight with "Mandy" Thompson's name on the ballot after a day of uncertainty over whether she or her husband, Roy, would make the race against Mayor A. L. Cottrill.

Women friends of Mrs. Thompson hailed the decision as a victory for the "Reshuffle Party," and prepared to stage a sun-bonnet parade in her honor tomorrow—election day in Glenville.

All day long the printer had held up the ballot-printing job until it was certain whether Mr. Thompson or Mrs. Thompson's name should be put on the vote blanks.

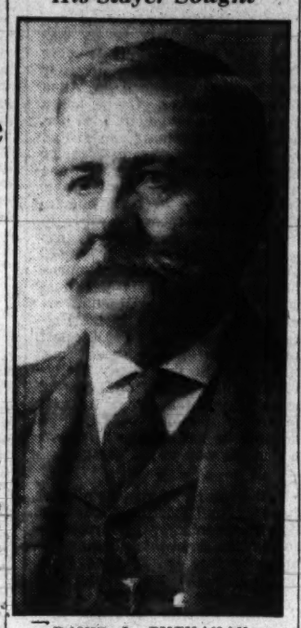
"We figure one candidate in the family is enough," emphasized Thompson.

Late in the day, Mrs. Thompson said her husband informed her, without giving a reason, that he had withdrawn and notified the election commissioners to leave her in the fight against Cottrill.

Thompson could not be reached, but a friend of the family said he explained:

"I wouldn't have a chance as long as Mandy was running anyway."

His Slayer Sought



DAVID L. BUCHANAN.

Suspect Seized In Hagerstown Murder Mystery

Former Roomer in Home of Victim Arrested at Race Track.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 3.—Sought since yesterday for questioning in the murder of David L. Buchanan, 79, a former roomer at the house Buchanan operated here, was taken into custody late today at the Charles Town race track.

The man gave his name as John F. Burke, 33, of Philadelphia. He was being questioned tonight at police headquarters by State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram, Captain of Police Clarence Emmert and Detective William Peters.

During the quizzing of eight other roomers at the Buchanan home, police learned that the suspect, also a roomer, had left early Sunday morning, taking with him a suitcase which Buchanan had been holding for an unpaid bill.

The suspect had arrived here with the opening of the local race meet and had roomed at the Buchanan place, but no one knew his name.

This afternoon, taking with them a roomer who knew the suspect by sight, they went to the Charles Town race track. When seized, Detective William Peters said a blood-stain was found on the collar of a shirt which Burke was wearing, but Burke explained that this had come from a scratch on his neck a week ago.

Police hoped to determine whether six $10 straight tickets on a horse that ran second Saturday and found in the rooming house were Burke's.

Capt. Emmert sent an iron bar and a hatchet, both of which appear to have bloodstains upon them, one which is believed to have been used to kill Buchanan, to a chemist. Both were found on the Buchanan property.

Washington County Boosts Tax Rate

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 3.—Washington County's tax rate was boosted 9 cents today to 97 cents.

The increase was made necessary because of restoration of half the teacher salary cut by the Legislature, the county road debt of $23,000 annually which the State roads commission served notice it would discontinue paying, and a levy for old-age pensions.

A cut was made in the appropriation sought by the board of education. The teacher salary restoration represented about 5 cents of the 9-cent increase in the levy.

Charles J. Butler, of Easton, succeeded Stuart S. Janney as chairman of the State Board of Welfare; Judge Robert F. Action Deferred on Bids For Factory Expansion

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., June 3.—Numerous bids for erection of auxiliary units at Amcelle and for installation of auxiliary machinery have been received by the Celanese Corporation of America, but officials yesterday said no immediate expansion is contemplated at the plant, pending changes in the textile trade and general business conditions. The new machinery and units will cost about $100,000, it was said, and contracts may be awarded within the next six months.

More than $500,000 was expended last year for new buildings and machinery at Amcelle, now one of the largest industrial plants in Maryland. Officials intimated that contracts for the auxiliary units and machinery may be let before autumn, depending upon the increase of business.

Government Costs Take 25 Pct. Of U. S. Income, Says Pollard

By the Associated Press.

Chairman John G. Pollard of the Veterans Appeal Board in an address here tonight said national, State and local Governments this year have "taken an amount equal to the earnings of all the people for months of January, February and March and it was not until April fool's day that the people began to work for themselves."

Describing the costs of governments, the former Virginia Governor said the governments of the country are "expending one-fourth of the income of all the people in the United States, or to put it another way, our governments have grown so expensive they take in taxes the total fruits of the labor of all the people for one-fourth of their time."

Speaking to the Order of the Coif, National Legal Fraternity, at its annual dinner, Pollard said the Federal Government last year cost nearly $20,000,000,000 a day.

Asserting the Federal Government now has 95,000 employes in Washington and "ten times that number drawing Federal pay in the States," he said "taxes have become a substantial part of the individual budget of every citizen and that for business reasons, if none other, he must pay attention to and participate in the conduct of the Government under which he lives."

He cited a report of the public service personnel commission that there are now on national, State and local government pay rolls 3,278,500 people with the number growing daily.

Labor Leader Reports Area Reduces Pay

At Least 25 Plants Have Lengthened Hours, McCurdy Says.

Campaign Is Launched to Maintain Gains Under NRA.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 3.—Joseph C. McCurdy, president of the Baltimore Federation of Labor and the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor, said today he had received "at least 25" reports of employers changing wages and lengthening hours since the NRA decision by the Supreme Court.

McCurdy said a concerted campaign to halt wage-cuts and work-hour changes and to extend the influence of labor in Baltimore had been launched by the local federation.

The labor head estimated 10,000 employes had been affected by the changes.

"Since the NRA decision, I have received at least 25 reports of employers changing wages and lengthening hours. One big manufacturing firm, I was told, began to work its employes 10 hours a day on Saturday," McCurdy said.

"Virtually all the chiseling so far, however, has been in stores and plants which are not organized.

"We are not trying to hurt employers. It's to our advantage to keep them in business—but not at the cost of low wages.

"We realize that a lot of decent employers are going along with us, trying to keep conditions preserved. But there are some that won't."

Washington Beauties Will Make Film Debuts Before Paramount Cameras Today

Fourteen Have Call to Appear For Extra Duty

Go to Annapolis Today; Joan Marsh Hit on Radio; Amusement Chatter.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Fourteen of Washington's fairest daughters will have the exciting experience of making their screen debut today in a scene in "Annapolis Farewell." Paramount's dramatic film story of the United States Naval Academy, which has been in production at Annapolis since May 14. There were to have been 15 belles from the National Capital in the picture—three selected by each of the five drama desks of the local press—but one seems to have fallen by the wayside, somehow and somewhere.

There also will be in the neighborhood of 20 girls from Baltimore in the same scene, chosen by the drama desks of the Monumental City.

The scene, showing the arrival of the girls in Annapolis to attend a Naval Academy dance, will be made at the Bladen street station of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad, under the supervision of Alexander Hall, director of "Annapolis Farewell," and James Hogan, assistant director.

Camera work is scheduled to begin at 9 o'clock this morning and the girls will report at the Bladen street station at 8:30 for rehearsals. Each girl will carry overnight luggage and will wear summer street clothes.

June Week Ball Later.

Later in the week the girls will appear in scenes showing the Naval Academy dance in Dahlgren Hall during June Week, and as this will be one of the most difficult scenes in the production, Director Hall may find it necessary to devote two or three days to the task of getting it on celluloid.

The girls from Washington and Baltimore who will participate in these important sequences of "Annapolis Farewell" were selected by the drama desks of the capital and the neighboring Maryland city as representatives of the most promising screen types in the two cities. The list includes some of the most prominent and beautiful girls in Washington. Nearly all have had dramatic training or experience in amateur or professional productions.

These scenes, made by Director Hall in Annapolis, will be minutely scrutinized in the Paramount Studio projection room in Hollywood, and if any of the girls are particularly promising as film types, they may be called to the West Coast for work in future productions. This, however, is not guaranteed, either by Paramount or the drama desks that made the selections.

On Lookout for a Star.

If there is a potential star among the girls, Director Hall is determined to find her, and all of the young women will be under studio observation during the making of the scenes in which they appear.

The entries of the Washington critics in this thrilling adventure are Mary Elizabeth Overton, Helen Tewksbury, Jane Holt, Elsie Behrend, Frida Frazer, Mary Tyler McCormack, Joan Archer, Julie Delle Zimmerman, Alicia Rogers, Veronique Thorne, Ann Gillis, Margaret Richardson, Arman Bakshian and Helen Kirkland.

It is with gratification that this desk makes known that its candidates are the three first named in the preceding paragraph—Mary Elizabeth Overton, Helen Tewksbury and Jane Holt.

Miss Overton is the youngest daughter of Senator John H. Overton, of Louisiana; Miss Tewksbury, a prominent society beauty, rumors of whose engagement recently commanded considerable newspaper space, and Miss Holt is the sister of Rush Holt, the "baby Senator," who can not be seated until he has reached the constitutional age. All are "screen types" that should engage the interest of the Hollywood scouts.

Having "done our duty as we seen it," we can only wish the candidates for future greatness good luck, the "breaks" and a chance at a few foreground shots. The rest should be easy.

This Alexander Hall, director of "Annapolis Farewell," is the same chap who was responsible for the cutting and editing of Mae West's first smash hit, "She Done Him Wrong," and the director of her latest sensational box-office success, "Goin' to Town," now in its second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. After that experience, he should know something about pulchritude and screen requirements in the matter of feminine loveliness!

Miss Marsh "Gets Across."

Joan Marsh, headlining the current stage bill at Leow's Fox Theater, is endowed with a superlative measure of what, for want of a better name, is known as "audience appeal". Sometimes it is referred to as "glamour." It is a quality which Rosalind Keith, whose likeness appears on this page, is said to possess in abundance.

It seems not to matter whether Miss Marsh's audiences are visible to her, or she to them, or not. The effect is the same.

For instance, immediately following her last stage appearance at the Fox on Friday, her opening day, Miss Marsh was induced by Lee Everett, program manager at Station WJSV, of the Columbia Broadcasting System, to appear on a program over the Dixie network. When the blonde starlet appeared for her first performance on the stage Saturday, there awaited her, so I am told by Lou Brown, my co-king for a day at today's [illegible] Club luncheon at the Willard, a surprising number of telegrams, special delivery letters and even an armful of flowers from [illegible] who wished to express their personal commendation of her radio talents.

Interviewed by President's Announcer.

Miss Marsh sang several songs into the microphone and was interviewed by Larry Elliott, who, with Warren Sweeney, have just gone through a winter of punishment putting the present writer on the air Wednesday mornings and early afternoons.

Joan will appear before the mike again tonight at 10:15, over WJSV, and at 8:15 p. m., on Wednesday. Her accompanist, Bill Steele, appears with her on these broadcasts.

Unknown to her many Eastern screen followers, Miss Marsh has been featured guest artiste on some of the foremost national programs emanating from the Pacific Coast stations.

Her popularity is wholly understandable. Like Ruth Etting, Mitzi Mayfair, Jack Powell, Elissa Landi and a few others, she is the thoughtful sort of young women who dispatches cordial telegrams of appreciation to the drama desks for merely reporting the truth about her stage appearance. One reposes on my desk as this is written.

Its recent indifference to the superior excellence of "The Informer," starring Victor McLaglen, to the contrary notwithstanding, the Washington picture going public generally manifests that discriminating judgment for which it is nationally noted. Take the case of "The Unfinished Symphony," now in its second week at the Belasco, for example. This extraordinarily well-produced, directed, acted and sung story of the romantic early life of the great composer, Franz Schubert, embellished with the most popular of the Schubert compositions, has been so generously received by Capital screen-gazers that it will be continued through a third week on Lafayette Square, according to present plans of the management. It is about the circumstances surrounding the composition of the B minor symphony — the "unfinished symphony"—and the "Ave Maria" that the action of this sterling picture revolves. If you have not already enjoyed the performance of Hans Jaray, as Schubert; Helen Chandler, as the girl who loved him from afar, and Marta Eggerth, who sings the role of the countess flawlessly, you will want to, this week or next. Don't under any circumstances let the Shriners crowd you out!

Hollywood Comes East.

Annapolis is not the only nearby "location" that has been taken over by a motion picture production unit.

The advance caravan of a Hollywood production company, the identity of which, so far, has been kept secret, has taken over the principal hotel in Leesburg, Va., reputedly 62 strong. This, of course, includes the mechanical crews and a majority of the supporting players to be included in the cast.

Two co-stellar leads are scheduled to arrive from Hollywood on June 15, following which the principal scenes of the picture, whatever it is, will be photographed.

In addition to "Hollywood-on-the-Severn," as Annapolis has come to be known, there is a likelihood that we also may have a "Hollywood-in-the-Old-Dominion." The movie moguls evidently believe that "there's gold in them thar hills."

California Night will be celebrated at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow night, it is announced by Gene Ford, managing director of the theater. Invitations have been extended to the California delegation in Congress and officers of the California State Society of Washington to be guests of the management to pay honor to Californians appearing on this week's bill. These would be Joan Marsh, blonde headliner of the stage bill; the California Collegians, appearing in the same portion of the program, and Phil Lampkin, musical director. Bill Steele, Miss Marsh's accompanist, as it happens, hails from the wrong seaboard, being a New Yorker instead of a Californian.

"Go West, Young Man!"

John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, will leave for California on Wednesday of this week, June 5, to attend the international sales convention of Warner Brothers and their affiliates, First National, Cosmopolitan and Vitaphone. Robert Smeltzer, manager of the Warner Brothers Washington branch film exchange, will accompany Mr. Payette to the Coast.

Today and tomorrow Mr. Payette is spending in New York, booking entertainment for the Earle Theater. He will arrive in Hollywood on June 9 and return to Washington on June 28. The convention will be called to order on June 10 and will continue until June 23.

Miss Davies, Hostess.

More than 300 representatives of Warner domestic and foreign activities will be in attendance, including Harry M., Maj. Albert and Jack L. Warner, heads of the organization. Marion Davies will be the convention will be the first to official hostess.

At the studio, the delegates to see Max Reinhardt's picturization of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and Marion Davies' "Page Miss Glory," her first for Warners, in their completed forms.

The climax of the convention will be a banquet attended by the Warner stars and featured players, with Jack L. Warner as chairman and toastmaster.

The Tart and Talent Dramatic Club will offer a return engagement of the three-act mystery-farce, "Black Peter Returns at Twelve," Wednesday night of this week at 8:15 o'clock. This performance is being given in the Parish Hall as a benefit for St. Stephen's and Incarnation Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and Newton streets northwest.

Stars Fall On the Severn.

Dick Powell will arrive in Annapolis today to begin work before the cameras in "Anchors Aweigh"—a name which it is understood is to be changed—the production the Warners are making with the cooperation of the United States Naval Academy. Ruby Keeler, who will costar with Dick, as she did in "Flirtation Walk," a story of the United States Military Academy at West Point, will arrive on location on the Severn on Wednesday. With her will come Lewis S. Stone, who has an important part in the production. Dick, incidentally, slipped surreptitiously into Washington yesterday, en route to Baltimore and Annapolis.

Frank Borzage, director, is already in Annapolis with a large mechanical crew. Mr. Borzage, if it makes any difference, is billeted at the Riby estate, a few miles from the Academy.

I don't know whether the drama desks will be asked to pick anybody for this one or not. In case we are, line forms on both the right and left by popular demand!

Colin Clive, of "Frankenstein" fame—also "Journey's End," "The Right to Live," "Lily Christine" and other fames—who appears importantly with Bette Davis in "The Girl From Tenth Avenue," coming to the Earle screen on Friday, is a direct descendant of Lord Clive who subjugated India and was recently celebrated in the film, "Clive of India," starring Ronald Coleman. Colin Clive's father is a colonel in the British army. Young Clive attended Sandhurst, the English equivalent of West Point, in the expectation of becoming an army officer. A broken knee, however, put an end to that and he turned his attention to the stage, instead. The stage, one is moved to observe, was lucky.

Appreciation Note.

"What is so rare——"

After yesterday, you ought to be able to finish it for yourself.

In Film Being Made at Annapolis

This smiling blonde, who recently stepped into the Hollywood spotlight as a potential screen star, is Rosalind Keith, a native of Belleville, Mo. She has been selected by Director Alexander Hall to play the leading role in "Annapolis Farewell," in which more than a dozen Washington beauties will appear, beginning this morning. The picture has been in production at the United States Naval Academy since May 14. Miss Keith, who is 18 years of age, recently completed work in the leading feminine role opposite George Raft in "The Glass Key." Here is the only feminine lead in "Annapolis Farewell."

Annual spring program by students of the Bekefi-Deleporte Institute of the Dance in Jewish Community Center Sunday night. Program: "Casse-Noisette" Ballet (Chaikovski), "The Dream Garden" (Deleporte), "The Evolution of Tap" (Lytell), and diverstissements.

Inasmuch as Chaikovski's "Casse-Noisette" ballet is directly derived from Hoffmann's fantastic tale involving an animated nutcracker, the king of the mice, and other creatures of faery, it is eminently fitting that it should be danced by children and young people. Doubtless Chaikovski did not intend it to be done that way, but he would have been delighted with the resultant combination of naivete and skill. Mature professionals could not possibly have evoked the illusion of juvenility which was a reality for these dancing youngsters.

The pupils of Theodore Bekefi, who was the Grossvater Droselmeyer of the cast, went through the evolutions of the formal ballet and the scurryings of the plot in the spirit of play. If the musical score sounded thin on a piano, and if the imaginations of the spectators had to supply the stage marvels of the palace of sweetmeats, there were compensations to be found in the zest of the performance.

Acrobatic dancing by pupils of Maurice Deleporte and the more strenuous forms of musical comedy stepping were demonstrated in "The Dream Garden." A few of the participants in the Chaikovski ballet showed their versatility by joining their elders in this display of muscular suppleness. If one singles out little Dorothy Ann Goodman for special commendation, that implies no disparagement of the others. And one enjoyed seeing that excellent violinist, Milton Schwartz, relaxing from the classics in a different kind of rhythmic agility.

The late start of the program and the long intermissions deprived the writer of opportunity to witness Billy Lytell's students in their exhibition of tap dancing and the concluding group of divertissements.

Hayden Revue

"DOIN' FIFTH AVENUE." Phil Hayden presents the fifth edition of his "Revue Intime," featuring pupils of his Studios of Dance. Musical score and lyrics by Mr. Hayden, orchestral arrangements and musical effects by Henry Evans, with orchestra under the direction of Pearl Hauer. Entire production staged and directed by Mr. Hayden and Ann Evans. At the National Theater. Reviewed Sunday evening by W. A. Whitney.

In two colorful acts and 39 scenes of varied manifestations of the terpsichorean art, the pupils of the Phil Hayden Studios of Dance trouped their way through "Doin' Fifth Avenue," the fifth edition of Phil Hayden's "Revue Intime," last evening at the National Theater before an appreciative audience of some 1,500 friends and relatives.

Setting the atmosphere for the numbers to follow, the program opened with the fast titular tap number by 22 boys and girls, who with other groups of students subsequently added ensembles to various solo routines.

Of the many creditable and varied numbers presented, no single number or small group of routines should be singled out for especial mention lest those not mentioned feel slighted. Every number, solo or ensemble, had its good points, though perhaps for varied reasons, with the whole resolving itself into a colorful and highly pleasing performance.

Among those who were spotted for solo routines were Dorothy Post, Ruth Lane, Virginia Astryke, Ruth Flaherty, Ann Hayden, Ethel Hayden, Marguerite Morrison, Frank O'Neill, Margaret and Elizabeth Ryan, Gladys Gibson, Kathryn Dengler, Betty Raymond, Mary Jane Zernia, Margaret Scott and Lorraine Imlay.

For the revue, Mr. Hayden penned 21 songs, of which he himself sang "Treadin' on Velvet."

"CHERRY BLOSSOMS." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 23 scenes, with "Raga" Ragland, Tommy Levine, Jimmy Pinto, Matty Della, Jess Mack, Johnny Cook, John Nichols, Evelyn Whitney, Jean Lee, Irma Vogelee, Millie Convey, Georgia Sothern, and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Flaie; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James V. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

In the penultimate attraction of the 1934-1935 season, and in consideration of the star-studded roster scheduled for the final show, come next Sabbath afternoon, one should not be too much misled by the attractive title of the current offering.

"Cherry Blossoms" is not a superlative show, although it is replete with comedians who are occasionally very funny, queens who achieve their raisons d'etre by divers methods, and a chorus reasonably proficient in line work.

The display artistes—Irma Vogelee, Evelyn Whitney, Georgia Sothern (doing week No. 2) and Jean Lee—practice their art and wiles to the complete satisfaction of the cash customers.

"Rags" Ragland, who, it is said, is making his final appearance before going to Broadway, has several scenes in which he tries hard to be effective, succeeding, however, only in that one where he pours red and blue "wine" and colorless "gin" out of a water pitcher. On the comic roll also is Tommy Levine, "Joosh" farceur. Jess Mack and Johnny Cooke are the straight men and John Nichols does the tenor warbling.

The Gossipel Truth.

Hollywood, June 3.

GRETA GARBO is on her way to New York, having departed Friday night after working that afternoon in "Anna Karenina" retakes. Garbo has a wardrobe of new gowns with her, and before entraining she visited the Du Barry beauty parlor where she astonished every one by getting a permanent wave. Greta will try to look human, which is another way for her to disguise . . . Peggy Fears has been going places with A. C. (Alternating Current) Blumenthal, and since he is her husband, it's news . . . Glenda Farrell's latest romance is Ed Bellande, an aviator . . . For the last week there hasn't been one sunny day in this sunny Hollywood. Bill Grady, the casting agent, claims that when he gets up to go to work at 7 in the morning he has to take a lantern to find his way to the garage.

Katharine Hepburn was offered the lead in "Twelfth Night" by Max Reinhardt for his presentation in The Bowl this summer but had to refuse it . . . Alice Faye and Vic Orsatti are dancing and dining at the Trocadero. About 11 o'clock Vic and Alice decide it is time to go home. They depart. A half an hour later Vic Orsatti is back at the Troc with another girl; ten minutes later Alice Faye enters the Troc with Nelson Eddy. Miss Faye and Mr. Orsatti are very surprised to see each other . . . Seymour Felix, staging a dance routine at Metro, was told to hurry the number. "I can't," said Felix, "I've got to study the lyrics and music and make the dances fit." "You can speed it up," said the producer. "Make the dancers take shorter steps."

COUNTESS DI FRASSO is throwing another party tonight. It's another costume party—how those actors and actresses like to dress up when they're not working—and the Countess has asked every one to come as her favorite actress or some one they like. But you can't come as yourself, even if you are your favorite actress . . . Ruth Chatterton is going as Carole Lombard; Joan Bennett as Jean Harlow, and the Countess will be Marlene Dietrich. They are trying to tempt Dietrich to come as Von Sternberg . . . Pauline Lord is displaying temperament and threatening to walk out of the cast of "So Red the Rose" because Margaret Sullavan will be billed over her . . . Anna Sten, who was holding out for $2,500 to go on the Rudy Vallee program, finally accepted $1,500 . . . Douglas Fairbanks is rushing to Hollywood in his yacht to attend those United Artists' conferences next week. He may bring Lady Ashley with him . . . Charlie Chaplin actually finished shooting his flicker last week—and that is news. He is now putting in the sound.

Vina Delmar went to work at Metro on a Joan Crawford story. She worked for four months on a Crawford yarn. During that time she couldn't get the producer who was paying her a huge weekly salary to read what she had written . . . When her contract was finished she left Metro with the Crawford yarn no one would read. She sold the story to Liberty. Metro read it and believed it ideal for a Crawford picture—and it was—for the story was "Sadie McKee."

Joan Bennett really intends to start a high-class fan magazine in an effort to stop some of the slush which is written about the movie stars . . . Bert Wheeler will howl when he learns that Joe E. Brown is doing his famous "mousie story" in "Broadway Joe." . . . Elsie Larsen was a waitress at a "drive-in" restaurant. She was selected as one of the prettiest girls in Hollywood and with much publicity was given a movie contract at Columbia . . . This was a little over a year ago. Miss Larsen is now a waitress at the Beverly Brown Derby and likes it better. For here she really gets a chance to see the directors and the stars. She had to laugh the other evening, when a director, in whose flicker she did a walk-on, said to her: "You oughta be in pictures."

Dolores Costello was offered a role in the new Hepburn flicker, "Alice Adams," but didn't take it . . . Mary Pickford owns the prints of many of her early Biograph pictures but she won't show them to anyone . . . Jack Cooper is now so grown up that Spanky Farland of "Our Gang" comedies had to be hired to play Jackie as a youngster . . . Charlie Chaplin's yacht is registered in Paulette Goddard's name . . . Eddie Cantor took the boat to Hollywood and while on his way wrote a letter to Ida every day. These letters will soon be published under the title, "Signed, Your Loving Husband." . . . They tell of the movie actor who just got in the money and got swanky. He hired a butler. Within a week the actor was complaining that the butler was kidding the cook. "That shouldn't concern you," the actor was told. "But it does," he answered. "My wife's the cook."

THE chairman of the Shrine boxing committee heaved a sigh of relief that was probably heard in Seattle when the District of Columbia Boxing Commission ruled that Jack Dempsey was eligible to referee the Shrine's Canzoneri-Klick fight here . . . over the protests of Klick's manager . . . the Shrine committee chairman had guaranteed Dempsey $1,500 for his services of referee and was holding the bag during the protest . . . Promoter Joe Turner had declared that he would not be responsible for any payment to Dempsey . . . and that the $1,500 fee must come out of the Shrine's end of the gate . . . but the Shrine figured rightly that Dempsey's name on the program is worth at least $1,500 in receipts.

Ruth's Title of 'Babe' Fits Him Fine Right Now, Says Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 3.—There are two minor notes of appealing pathos in the quitting of Babe Ruth. At least they struck me so. The matter that brought this long-brewing retirement from the Boston Braves to a head was a little boy's fit of pique and disappointment because Judge Fuchs wouldn't let him go to what looked like a pretty swell party, the welcome to the S. S. Normandie.

And in the Boston clubhouse Ruth was quoted as saying, "The team and McKechnie are swell. They are giving me a ball autographed by all the members of the team."

There is laughter in the first item but tears in the second. I know that Ruth must have come to hate the very sight of a clean, white baseball handed to him along with the inevitable fountain pen. In his long and great career he must have autographed literally thousands upon thousands of baseballs.

It seems little enough to ask a man to pen his name on the hide of a baseball or the cover of a program, but no one who has not been the target of the autograph pests can know what a terrible nervous strain is the constant interruption of thought, speech and action to autograph something.

And yet, with the deep irony of life, the parting souvenir that tells him that his teammates are fond of him and bear him no ill will and are sorry to see him go is the old familiar baseball with the names scrawled all over its surface. It is a valuable trophy at that. It is one of the few autographed baseballs in the world that doesn't bear the familiar Babe Ruth signature, unless when they presented it to him he autographed it from force of habit.

But I don't suppose one autographs testimonial baseballs any more than one rises to a toast that is personal. I wonder what Ruth will do with that ball that bears the names of the members of what is probably the last team he will ever play for. Inside of a year it will have vanished. And should it turn up ten years from now he won't remember the names on it. Ruth's memory for names is limited in scope. He is a great man to live for the immediate second. He just addresses everyone, "Hello, Keed!"

The Babe does things in an ever delightful manner. His pop-off in the dressing room was truly Ruthian and splendid. He called Judge Fuchs a double-crosser and went out in a blaze of fine expletive, most of it beautifully unprintable. He left no doubt in the minds of the reporters who listened to him what he thought of Fuchs.

A New York reporter interviewed Manager Bill Terry and Secretary Tierney of the New York Giants in Backbay Station after the incident and the Giant manager deplored Ruth's methods. He indicated that had he been in such a spot he would have issued a little deftly worded statement that he was retiring from baseball, that he and Fuchs were the best of friends and that all was amicable.

The fact that such a statement would be a definite aberration from the truth did not seem to trouble Terry. In fact, it never troubles anybody. Somehow there is a feeling that there is automatic absolution granted for telling whoppers to newspapers. I do not see anything disgraceful in quarreling with one's employers and if one lives in a business built in a goldfish bowl, in other words, a business that thrives on free publicity, why, then let the quarrels and the name-callings and all the exciting fuss and fuming be public, too.

Everybody loves a good row. Everybody likes to take sides. It clears the atmosphere and makes for excellent reading. There hasn't been as much fun, interest and excitement on the sports pages for months as the Babe Ruth stories today. We can only surmise what Judge Fuchs thinks of Babe Ruth. We know definitely what the Babe thinks of the judge.

It is too bad that one can not have a privately circulated copy of this home newspaper printed on asbestos, for much of the invective that Ruth used against the judge was, I am told, a definite contribution to the English language and should be preserved in case the future generations begin to soften up and want to learn what a real

Babe, Angry, Flays Club Owner

Says Fuchs Attempted to "Ease Hi mOut" and Blacken His Name.

Ordered to Autograph 500 Tickets for One Game, He Asserts.

By the United Press.

NEW York, June 3.—Babe Ruth completed a home run from Boston tonight, bellowing like a stuck bull over the alleged knavery of one Judge Emil Fuchs, "whose double-crossing, double-dealing and double-dyed lying caused me to leave the Braves."

The great Bambino who beat President Fuchs of the Braves to the punch yesterday by quitting the club before Fuchs could kick him out, leaped from his tan sedan, hurrie dinto his eighty-eighth street apartment, tore off his coat and gave a gang of baseball writers "my final statement against Fuchs"—the most sulphurous blast of invective ever exploded by the slugger in his long career.

Assails Club Owner.

Ruth said he quit the Braves because:

(1) "Fuchs found out that he couldn't pay me my $25,000 a year salary. Instead of coming to me like a man and explaining the situation, he tried to discredit me and ease me out. If he had acted like a man, I would have quit without trouble.

(2) "Fuchs thought I would invest my money in the Braves, or at least talk my friends into investing their money. And when I persistently ignored his hints on this subject, I was no longer welcome.

(3) "Fuchs thought he could use me as a glorified, dine-out, night-out salesman for his tickets—me, a 41-year-old guy who had to take marvelous care of himself to play ball at all—and when I refused to be a glorified salesman, he was through with me."

Pounds Fists in Anger.

That's the way Ruth crystalized his difficulties during two mad months with the Braves. Those were the chief reasons he gave as he squirmed about in ire in an easy chair, tramped about the living room floor of his apartment—pounding his fists, or leaning on the radio glaring at the reporters. His "whole story" of the Boston fiasco lasted nearly 45 minutes.

"I'm sore about the whole Boston affair," the Babe growled through clenched teeth, as he stood in the center of the room. "But what burns me to a crisp is Fuchs attempt to blacken my name, discredit me, and make it look as if Manager Bill McKechnie was the one who wanted me fired."

Then he roared, "but Fuchs won't get away with it. He can't make a foul ball out of me after all my years in the game. I'll match my baseball record with his, any day.

"I'm glad you fellows are here. I hate this business and I want to fin-

All Major Clubs Spurn Babe Ruth

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Babe Ruth, breaking off his comeback with the Boston Braves amid an outburst of bitterness after only three months of his three-year contract had elapsed, returned to New York tonight with his major league baseball future in doubt, if not entirely behind him.

There's no place in the big leagues for the big fellow to go. Not a single club in the National or American League, polled today by the Associated Press, manifested anything but an academic interest in what Ruth does next. None has any offer of any kind to make him, now, and the ill-feeling apparently generated by his Boston venture will likely scare off any major league magnate who still entertains a notion to capitalize the Babe's box-office value.

Manager Sides With Fuchs, Branding Ruth as Detriment

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, June 3.—While his right hand was still tingling from Babe Ruth's hearty farewell handshake, Bill McKechnie, manager of the sorely beset Boston Braves, today branded the newly retired home run slugger as a detriment to his ball club.

McKechnie, who had little to say about the Babe during the 97 days he served under his managership, hastened into a conference with President Emil Fuchs after seeing Ruth and his family leave by automobile for New York.

The pilot and his financially harassed superior spent most of the afternoon discussing ways and means for the immediate strengthening of their last-place baseball forces. When they adjourned their session, a long statement blasting Ruth's record as a Brave was issued over McKechnie's signature.

Called Main Trouble.

"I must state publicly that in justice to the action of Judge Fuchs with reference to Babe Ruth, on Friday and Saturday of last week I pointed out to Judge Fuchs that the main trouble with the ball club was that it was not able to function properly with Babe Ruth playing in the outfield," McKechnie said.

"I frankly stated that certain actions of Ruth, while with the ball club, which I would absolutely forbid with any other member of the club, were responsible for the lack of discipline, and that unless Judge Fuchs could convince Ruth to retire I was unable to get any real baseball discipline or proper spirit as manifested by the club previous to the acquisition of Ruth.

Hurlers Complained.

"The pitching staff complained continuously to the end that Judge Fuchs promised me that he would have a talk with Ruth and endeavor to show him the impossibility of the situation; that if Ruth could not join in the spirit of these suggestions, which were for his benefit as well as the decorum of the club, he would ask Ruth, in order to preserve his reputation, to retire and we would make his parting as commendable and pleasant as possible.

"I know that Judge Fuchs has been patient and has endeavored to give Ruth every opportunity to continue with the hope of improving. I regret the unfortunate termination of Ruth's connection with the club, but in order to be fair, I must state that Judge Fuchs' action was the result of my stating that the ball club as constituted, with a little help and necessarily with the elimination of Ruth, would again function in full efficiency and regain the standing it has enjoyed for the past several years."

U. S. Open Favorite Watches Chief Rival on Tee

Greens Seen Chief Jinx In Open

300 Will Be Shattered Only by Few Putts, Is Consensus.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, June 3.—With a few exceptions, the 139 professionals and 23 amateurs who will start the annual chase for the National Open Golf Championship on Thursday played a complete round over the 6,981-yard Oakmont course today, and all agreed the 300-odd brutal-looking traps are only incidental campared with the velvety greens.

In the consensus of such performers as Olin Dutra, the towering Californian and winner of the title at Merion a year ago; Gene Sarazen, twice a former winner, and the veteran Macdonald Smith, more shots will be required on the putting carpets than in making recoveries from the bunkers.

Greens Very Tricky.

Sarazen, Dutra and Smith all have had a sample of Auld St. Andrews' greens in Scotland, and, while the putting surfaces in the heather country may be a trifle faster, they're not half as tricky as the steep, undulating contours of Oakmont's greens.

On a number of holes the pins are located at the back of sharply sloped greens, virtually preventing a pitch and run approach and plac-

Hadley to Face Boston Today In Opener

By Shirley L. Povich.

HOME, no more to roam until the American League schedule calls them West on June 11, the skidding Nats meet up with the Boston Red Sox today in the first of a three-game series.

Clark Griffith sat in his little stucco office at Griffith Stadium yesterday, bothering not to call Manager Bucky Harris upstairs for the usual daily conference. The Nats' owner knows the whys and wherefores of his ball club's seven-game losing streak which has sucked it to within one game of seventh place.

Griffith summed up his ball team's problem in one word—pitchers. "It's a good ball club, except for the pitching," he said. "But I don't know where to turn now, with Buck Newsom out with his bad leg. I'd buy a pitcher, I'd buy two of 'em if there were any to be bought. But I won't pay money for pitching that doesn't figure to help us. And nobody's selling good pitchers these days.

Up Against It.

"We don't have anything in the minors that figures to strengthen us. There's Syd Cohen, down at Chattanooga, but I don't think he can win up here. We can get Carithers, that Albany left-hander, but he hasn't been winning lately. We're up against it, I tell you."

Today, Harris will send his most dependable pitching bet, Bump Hadley, against the Red Sox, bossed by Griffith's son-in-law, Joe Cronin. The Red Sox were smacked down in three straight games by the Nats up in Boston last month with the aid of Cronin's daily errors, but the Boston team won three straight from the Nats in its last appearance here.

Wes Ferrell, his ace right-hander, is Cronin's pitching choice today. Ferrel has had four days rest since he took part in both games of the Memorial Day double header, losing the second in a relief role after winning the first.

At his wits' end in his search for pitchers, Harris declared yesterday that he would give young Henry Coppoia a starting assignment in the Boston series, despite Coppola's unimpressive record in relief roles.

Harris' promotion of Jack Rus-

Yanks Outhit, But Conquer A's, 7 to 4

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Punching out hits when they meant runs, the New York Yankees turned in their third straight victory today as they defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 7 to 4, to increase their lead in the American League to two and one-half games over the idle White Sox.

In ending the four-game winning spurt of the Mackmen, the Yanks found themselves outhit, 11 to 9, but they bunched their blows off George Blaeholder, George Caster and Roy Mahaffey.

Jimmy DeShong, youthful right-hander, made his first start of the year and managed to hold the A's in check until the ninth, despite home runs by Eric McNair and Wally Moses.

Charles Town Double Pays $648; Girl One of Two to Cash In

Baltimorean Also Made Happy

Goantell, Daffy Race to Victory for Record Track Pay-Off.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN RACE TRACK, June 3.—Washington and Baltimore divided honors as the largest daily double in the history of this mountain race track, $648.80, was paid to two customers here this afternoon.

They would not give their names. A little girl, who boarded the racing special at Washington and confessed that "my mother don't even know I'm at the race track," cashed one of the small fortunes. The other went to a rotund Baltimorean, "none of that newspaper stuff," but admitted he was an insurance agent in the Equitable Building.

These were the only two tickets sold, the "double pool" before the deductions, amounting to $1,442. There were many tales of "I told you so" and "if you hadn't talked me off that first one," but the only ones that counted were those two that were told by those who cashed.

Liked His Looks.

The girl didn't have any special reason for playing Goantell and Daffy, the winning combination, although she said that she "liked the looks of Goantell in the paddock." The Baltimorean said he "figured" the horses by their past performances. Neither would admit that the second horse's name, Daffy, had been played on a hunch.

However, Daffy was an appropriate name for the winner of the third race. The horses were at the post, or in the vicinity of the post, for 15 minutes—that is, all but Little Fred. This horse, the favorite as the field paraded to the post, heard the mutuel bell ring, reared and threw his rider, Frank Cusimano, a little Italian boy from Four-and-a-half street in Washington.

Horse Runs Wild.

Once free, Little Fred ran three-fourths of the way around the track before being caught. In charge of the outrider, Little Fred was led back to the point where he had lost his rider but before Cusimano could be boosted into the saddle, the horse broke away again. Little Fred staged a riderless 330-yard dash to the merriment of all who didn't bet on him. This time he was flagged down by a stableman who walked him back to the front of the stands.

Here Cusimano, who was getting a big hand from the 3,000 present, climbed in the saddle but Little Fred soon shook him off. At this point, Track Superintendent Charlie Feltner took charge. In the meanwhile, the paddock bell had ceased ringing. Cusimano was assisted into the saddle for the third time and he stayed there. While this was going on, Our Time was installed the favorite. Just to be different Little Fred acted like an angel at the barrier while Abbott's Folly and Season tried to wreck the starting gate.

And it was only fitting, that Daffy should win such a crazy race. Daffy paid $17 for straight tickets.

Cusimano was given a big hand and showed his appreciation by giving Clifton's Marie a $1,000,000 or at least a $900,000 ride in the next race to win at $7.20.

WEST STAR, rated along cleverly while kept within striking distance of the leaders, came through on the inside at the stretch turn, responded gamely to pressure and outlasted MAIDWELL at the end. MAIDWELL, sent to the front, was rated along under slight restraint, lost some ground at the stretch, but was unable to stave off the winner. NERVY NELLA improved her position during the first half-mile. WASWANNAPPI came gamely on the outside through the last three-sixteenths. BETTY GIBSON, slow to begin, moved up with a rush.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEPAWAY, $9.30, $4.70, $3.60; FLAG BEARER, $5.90, $4.30; LAN, $3.20.

STEPAWAY, prominent from the start, was unable to keep pace with FLAG BEARER and surrendered the command, leaving the latter to the stretch, but came gamely through the stretch and was going away at the end. FLAG BEARER drew into a good lead approaching the stretch, though weakening in the last furlong. LAN, on the outside all the way, closed gamely under urging. PROSECUTOR, forced to take up nearing the far turn when OUR WAY crossed over, was in close quarters again midway of the far turn, but when clear closed gamely when OUR WAY displayed speed, but tired in the closing tests. SOBRIETY, quickest to begin, was outrun by SANDY MACK and BRIGHT AND EARLY, moved up on the outside when called upon, took command without effort and drew out steadily through the stretch. JAMBOREE, under urging all the way, responded gamely in the last quarter-mile and closed stoutly, though unable to threaten the winner. SANDY MACK displayed good speed all the way. PLUCKY JACK closed with a serious threat, though unable to enter into serious contention. BRIGHT AND EARLY away well, showed good speed for the first three furlongs and tired thereafter.

TED HUSING	110	3	4	2¹	3½	6nk	7	Robertson	10.15

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARCAROLLE, $7.60, $3.90, $3.40; GLYNDON BELLE, $4.90, $3.40; TRULY YOURS, $3.90.

BARCAROLLE, promptly placed from the start, responded gamely to hard urging in the stretch and was up in the closing strides to wear down GLYNDON BELLE. The latter, restrained early, moved up fast nearing the stretch, took command and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to withstand the closing challenge of the winner. TRULY YOURS moved up steadily leaving the back stretch, but lugged in badly through the stretch. SANCTITY closed willingly on the outside in the last quarter-mile. ERIN LAD displayed good speed, but tired through the closing furlong. TED HUSING faltered badly after showing good early speed.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,500. The Lexington Purse. For 3 and 4-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:33½. Winner, C. V. Whitney's br. f. (3), by Bickle—Pantalette. Trained by J. A. Healey. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 1:12 3-5, 1:36 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PANTOUFLE, $10.60, $6.90, $3.30; BOSTON BROOK $6.80, $3.30; FURFIBER, $2.40.

PANTOUFLE, racing imsoved, followed in closest pursuit of the pace, took command midway of the far turn and, hard ridden, held BOSTON BROOK safe at the end. BOSTON BROOK displayed speed from the start and fought it out courageously to the end. FURFIBER, taken back of the pace, responded gamely when called upon, reached stoutly, and was going fastest of all at the end. ROUGH PARTY dropped far back early, though closing ground, never was able to reach the leaders. LONMEG weakened under pressure.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:04. Off at 5:07. Winner, E. Seguin's br. h. (5), by Chicle—Rowes Bud. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $830; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:13, 1:40 3-5, 1:46.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALOIS, $9.50, $4.90, $3.50; SPEEDMORE, $6.40, $4.50; CUTIE FACE, $3.70.

BALOIS went to the front straightening out on the back stretch, was steadied along in front until nearing the half-mile ground, surrendered the command to SPEEDMORE, but came again leading the stretch and drew out, though kept under intermittent punishment. SPEEDMORE displayed good speed, but was not good enough to win. CUTIE FACE, kept prominent from the start while racing restrained, held on gamely in the drive. HOKUAO had early speed, but weakened. COHORT MISS lacked speed and was outrun throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:37. Off at 5:39½. Winner, Col. W. A. Jones' b. f. (3), by Pharamond II—Rock Pocket. Trained by G. L. Hamilton. Value to winner, $750; second $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:14, 1:41, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POCKET, $4.80, $4.20, $3.30; GRACIAS, $9.30, $5.70; BELOW COST, $10.30.

POCKET followed in closest attendance of the pace, went to the front when called upon, responded upon a good lead and won with speed in reserve. GRACIAS, restrained close up, responded gamely to punishment and closed willingly. BELOW COST displayed good speed for the first six furlongs, faltering slightly thereafter. WINGED FLIGHT was never a factor. SANTERNO, away slowly, was taken up straightening out on the back stretch, but was unable to make up ground when placed under punishment.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 6:11. Off at 6:19. Winner, H. Dongon's b. f. (4), by Ladkin—Cypher. Trained by J. J. Barker. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49, 1:13 3-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:52 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LONG BIT, $15.10, $6.90, $4.70; REVONAH, $8.50, $5.80; GUAPITO, $4.80.

LONG BIT away with the leaders, was not hurried after gaining a prominent position, wore down REVONAH in the stretch and drew out steadily all the last sixteenth. REVONAH, unruly at the post, took command in the run to the first turn, was tested along in front under slight restraint, withstood repeated bids from PRIMUTE and had nothing left when the winner challenged. GUAPITO, outrun, moved up on the outside leaving the back stretch and closed going gamely. PRIMUTE, much used in an effort to reach the pacemaker, faltered in the drive. MORALIST well up, was unable to improve position under pressure. FABIUS, restrained early, was unable to improve his position to any great extent. GRAINGER was never a factor.

Whitney's Pantoufle Wins at Rockingham

Salem, N. H., June 3 (AP).—A brown, 3-year-old named Pantoufle flounced to victory at Rockingham Park in the feature race this afternoon and ran the mile in 1:38 2-5, only a second behind the track record.

The little miss, owned by C. V. Whitney, was rated along in an intelligent manner by Jockey Nick Wall. She watched Boston Brook and Lonmeg set a cracking pace for the first three-quarters, but always was within jumping distance.

Loughran to Face Imp.

The Post's Consensus at Rockingham

Astor Clarke Is Ranked No. 1 Bowler in District for Season

Joe Harrison In Second Position

District Rankings, 1934-35 Season.

1-Astor Clarke	6-Tony Santini
2-Joe Harrison	7-W. (Hokie) Smith
3-Ollie Pacini	8-Joe Fresch
4-Eddie Espey	9-Perce Wolfe
5-Bill Krauss	10-Ed Blakeney

Honorable Mention.

11-Reds Mezaw	13-Whib Litchfield
12-Paul Harrison

THE Washington City Duckpin Association ranking committee last night officially and unanimously elected Astor Clarke as the No. 1 ranking bowler of the city for the season of 1934-35. Joe Harrison, last year's city champion, received No. 2 ranking; Ollie Pacini, third, and Eddie Espey, fourth.

The task of selecting the first ranking bowler was reached with little difficulty by the ranking committee, Clarke holding the upper hand in league competition with an average of 124-5, standing second in special events with 123-12 and carrying an average of 124-68 in special matches.

Second by One Vote.

The rankings were made on a 60, 30 and 10 per cent basis, league competition receiving the highest consideration, followed by local and special events and national competition. Joe Harrison received no opposition for second honors, barely missing the unanimous distinction by one vote. His combined league average of 123, special match average of 124-79 and 123-78 in special events undisputedly gave him the runner-up position.

Ollie Pacini's consistent sweepstakes activities, wherein he averaged 125-52, his league average of 120 and special match average of 125-50, were enough to give the former national champion the third ranking position.

Runner-Up in 1934.

Although receiving the ranking of No. 2 bowler of the country last year, Clarke failed to take down the top District ranking in 1934 due to the matchless efforts of Joe Harrison, his teammate. Even though he got the nod over Harrison for the 1934-35 season, there seems to be little hope of his receiving the No. 1 national ranking as the committee voted nine to one against him in favor of Nick Tronsky, the Connecticut ace.

Only two bowlers hold the distinction of gaining the city ranking twice, Ollie Pacini being elected in 1932-33 and 1933-34, and Bradley Mandley in 1926-27 and 1928-29.

Summary of Votes.

Tribe's 7 Runs in 14th Defeat Browns, 11 to 4

St. Louis, June 3 (AP).—Exhibiting a surprising fourteenth-inning attack, the Cleveland Indians hammered two St. Louis pitchers for seven runs and took what had been a see-saw battle, 11 to 4. Bruce Campbell's home run with the bases filled featured the attack.

Helen Wills Beats Rival in Comeback

Displays Old-Time Form to Win in England.

By the Associated Press.

Weyoridge, Eng., June 3.—Helen Wills Moody, who left Helen Jacobs holding the sack—and the American championship—in that memorable match at Forest Hills 21 months ago, returned to competitive tennis today with an authoritative 6-2, 6-0 victory over an 18-year-old English girl, Jill Notley, in the second round of the St. George's hill tournament today.

There was no trace of any crick in comely Helen's back as she played with all her old-time grace to outclass the former British junior champion in a 21-minute match.

Serving only with moderate pace, the former world's champion found her blazing drives and formidable reputation sufficient to subdue Jill, who palpably was scared stiff from the outset.

Aga Khan Trio Dominates Derby Bets

Bahram Favorite at 10-11; Second, Third Choices Also Prince's.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 3.—The British turf world was ready tonight to concede the 156th running of the Derby to the Aga Khan, the Indian prince who is religious and spiritual leader of more than 100,000,000 Mohammedans.

Never before in the history of the classic has one owner held so strong a hand—the odds-on favorite as well as the second and third choices in the advance betting.

Today's call-over established the Aga Khan's Bahram a top-heavy favorite at 10 to 11, while Bahram's running mates, Hairan and Theft, were held at 100 to 12 and 100 to 9, respectively.

Field Trial 100 to 8.

Back of this formidable trio were Lord Astor's Field Trial, 100 to 8; C. W. Gordon's Sea Bequest, 13-1; Mrs. C. Evans' First Son at 25 to 1; Lord Derby's Fairhaven at 1,000 to 35, and Lord Glanely's Screamer and Mrs. Corlette Glorney's American-owned Assignation, each at 50 to 1.

So completely does the Aga Khan's entry dominate the field that the prince was the butt of many a good-natured jibe at the annual Press Club Derby luncheon today.

"May I suggest," said Lord Derby, "that if the Aga Khan has any spare horses not running in the Derby next year, he loan them to others, then we might get an interesting race."

Lord Carnarvon thought the other horses would become "sick of racing when they see the tails of the Aga Khan's entries."

Lord Astor said his own sentiments were faith, hope and charity—faith that the best horse would win, hope that all owners running horses in the Derby had, and charity toward "the person who can start three horses in the race."

A huge crowd had gathered at Epsom Downs where the Derby will be run Wednesday over a grueling mile and a half course.

Sharkey Cards 77 To Win Play-Off

Noses Out Dettweiler for Medal by a Stroke.

Buddy Sharkey, 14-year-old Gonzaga High School golf star, shot a 77 yesterday at Indian Spring Country Club to win in the 18-hole playoff for the medal in the Metropolitan Schoolboy championship.

Sharkey nosed out Billy Dettweiler, of Georgetown Prep, tournament finalist and favorite, by one stroke. Bobby Brownell, of Roosevelt High, finished with 79, and his lanky brother, Jim, also of Roosevelt, picked up after going out in 44.

The four golfers had tied with 80 each in the qualifying round at Indian Spring a few weeks ago.

Dempsey Gets Approval of Commission

'Accepted" as Referee of Canzoneri-Klick Fight Here.

THE BOXING COMMISSION yesterday sat in solemn conclave on the question of sanctioning Jack Dempsey as a referee for the Canzoneri-Klick bout and what to do about the impromptu post-bout fight engaged in by Natie Brown and Buck Everett following their recent 10-round thriller.

At the end of hours of solemn conclaving, the moguls of maul decided Dempsey was acceptable as a referee, but that he must officiate at the important lightweight contest at Griffith Stadium next Monday night in accordance with District of Columbia rules.

After listening to both sides of the case in the Brown-Everett brawl, the commission pronounced it an "unavoidable accident" and took no disciplinary action against either party.

Not Officially Assigned.

Dempsey's acceptance by the commission as a "suitable" referee does not mean that he has been officially assigned to the duty of refereeing the Canzoneri-Klick contest, but it amounts to the same thing. Under the rules of the commission, a referee can not be officially named until the day of the bout.

The old Man Mauler will be forced to prep up on the rules and regulations of the District Commission. He will be sent a copy of the rule book immediately, with instructions from the local governing board of boxing to "start cramming."

The Commission listened to all parties concerned in the Everett-Brown tussle excepting Everett himself, who is vacationing in North Carolina. Brown claimed he went to Everett's corner imediately after the last official punch had been tossed, for the purpose of shaking hands.

Says He Was Called Name.

Brown claims thae at this point he was pushed aside by Jimmy Erwin, Buck's manager, and called uncomplimentary names by Everett. Whereupon Natie began to battle anew. Jack Loukota, Everett's second, Irwin and Everett himself were the only ones in a position to have heard the exchange of remarks, if any, and Loukota and Erwin both denied hearing them.

Everett made very little effort to fight back as Brown kept swinging wildly away in the general direction of the fighter who had conquered him, so the Commission could not hold him responsible. The Commission took the recognizance of the fact that Brown's attempt to swing on Everett took place before the decision was announced, and because of that, and other reasons, he also was exonerated.

Frankie Klick took his third local workout for the Canzoneri bout at the Sportland Gymnasium yesterday against Joe Rivers and Ray Ingram. The challenger for the lightweight crown worn by Tony from New Orleans performed better than he had in any previous workout.

Still somewhat listless and sluggish, Frankie had little trouble handling the determined attack of Ingram and showed to good advantage against Rivers.

"We will shoot the works in the gymnasium Thursday," Ray Carlen, manager of Klick, said after the training session. "Frankie isn't ordinarily a good gymnasium fighter, but we'll have him show you something then. So, please don't form any opinion of him until then."

Tony Canzoneri will arrive in Washington Thursday, according to latest information received by Promoter Joe Turner's office. Tony originally had not planned on reaching the Capital until Saturday or Sunday, but decided he had better be here becoming acclimated. He may change his mind later, however.

Eastern, Tech Teachers Turn Pupils for Today, Cross Bats

AGE cames before beauty or baseball today at Eastern School. Which is one way of explaining that the faculty ball teams of Eastern and Tech will renew their annual warfare this afternoon on the verdant sod of Eastern's ball diamond. The game will start promptly at 3 o'clock in order to assure time enough to make away with the sumptous feast to follow, before midnight.

Anxious to keep intact its one-game winning streak, which it set up last year when it sprang the big upset of its one-game season by defeating Eastern, Tech will again recruit the services of Jittery Jack Ray, Central's baseball coach. Ray will assist the back-stop in stopping the pitches of eloquent Ed Foxley, Tech Coach, who has appointed himself to start on the mound.

The rival pitchers will be none other than Chubby Charlie Guyon who has worked his waist-line down to a mere 44 for the big game. The Chief will throw 'em up to catcher Artie Boyd, the transplanted Tech coach, who last year was one of those giving Tech its first victory in the eight-year-old series.

Assistant Principal John Paul (We-have-not-yet-b e g u n-to-fight) Collins will dominate a radius of all of 3 feet around first base. He has put his infielders under a blanket code assuring not more than one low throw per inning.

Other members of the infield cast will be Prof. Simons at second, Coach Mike Kelley, at short, and James A. Suber, at third. In view of the numerous opportunities for foliage study around the center field hedge, Malcolm Fuchs, of the biology department, has been assigned to that locality. Prof. Paul Lackey, of the manual training department, will patrol the left field sector and Prof. Dan Lloyd, who teaches geography, will ramble o'er the right field geography.

Prepared to fill in at a moment's notice will be such stars as Profs. Henry Flury, Ellis Holworth, Joe Kitchka, Bill Baxter and Dr. Charles Guilford.

Mad Maxie's Training Like Musical Comedy

(The third of a series of articles about the camps and training methods of fighters preparing for major bouts this month. In previous stories the writer described the quarters and conditioning routines of James J. Braddock and Tony Canzoneri.)

By Bill McCormick.

A ONE-RING circus—with Max Baer balancing himself on the ball instead of balancing the ball—that's the Asbury Park "training camp," where the hilarious heavyweight is preparing to defend his championship against Jim Braddock June 13.

Everything about Merrie Maxie's headquarters is goofy—uproariously goofy, with a musical comedy brand of madness. Country estates, beautiful blondes, music, crooning, valets, dancing girls, butlers—all form a background for the role of comedian in which Madcap Max himself stars.

No rustic lodge such as those in which Braddock and Joe Louis lay themselves down to sleep every night houses Maxie the Mummer. He is stabled in a beautiful country home at Deal, N. J., some four or five miles from where he goes through the motions every afternoon for his public.

Shades of Sullivan.

No horde of sports writers, rubbers, ribbers, trainers, sparmates and whatnot hanging around the champion while he isn't working. No, sir. Occupying the country home with Baer are Ancil Hoffman, his manager; Mrs. Hoffman. Dolph Thomas, his trainer; Mrs. Thomas, one butler, one valet, two cooks and one chauffeur. Shades of John L. Sullivan!

Marvelous Maxie's workouts are perhaps the most amusingly serious workouts ever staged. They are held in a small arena just a block off the boardwalk at Asbury. Showman that he is, Baer manages to lay 'em in the aisles at every performance—and still get in many a good lick in his training.

Greeted With Applause.

Comes the first sparmate, one Eddie Houghton, formerly stablemate of Tommy Loughran's. He dances around the champion, poking out a swift left jab which rolls off Baer's head as he ducks and swings his head. Baer holds Houghton off with a straight left, then shoots home three left jabs to the face. A new punch—or at least one he didn't show against Carnera.

Baer is working without a headguard. Houghton sees an opening and rams home a sizzling right to the chin as the champion reaches up to adjust his mouthpiece. Like a flash Baer's playfulness is gone. He crouches and his face assumes that unholy leer he wore every time he decided to set Carnera down. Crash! From somewhere comes a right, catching poor Eddie high on the head. Max steps in and, zing! goes a right uppercut, sending Houghton back on his heels. Another new punch, that uppercut. Baer rushes in to catch Houghton before he can fall.

Time Out for Blonde.

Comes another sparmate and Baer alternately fights and clowns with him. Suddenly he espies a gorgeous platinum-thatched creature gazing up at the ring in rapturous admiration. Out goes the champ's left, holding the sparmate at bay while he waves at the blonde with his right.

"Oh, hello, beautiful," he yodels. "I didn't know you were here or I'd have been working harder."

With that the champion tears furiously into the bewildered sparring partner, battering him almost non compos meutis before deciding to relax again.

Machine Gun Precision.

Baer shoots both hands to the bag with machine-gun precision—preparation for a body attack. He dances around the bag and slips in a wet spot.

"I huts my foots, I doan' fight," he growls, in imitation of Primo Carnera's basso as he limps about.

Following the bag work comes the bit with the ball. Max stretches face down on a specially prepared platform, and a basket ball is slipped under his stomach. Round and round on the ball rolls Maxie, lifting his feet high in the air as he rolls. It is a truly remarkable demonstration of the power of his stomach, which is almost ended when a raucous fan shouts, "You'd look more natural balancing the ball."

The king of the heavyweights retires to his dressing room, taking curtain calls right and left and signing autographs for his admiring public as he leaves the arena.

More Serious Baer.

In the dressing room is a different Baer. A more serious Baer. But not a less confident Baer.

"Lissen," he told the writer. "Do you know anybody down in Washington wants to bet on Braddock? If you do, I'll lay 2 to 1 on myself to knock Jim out—within 10 rounds."

Stories of Baer's not being in condition are obviously pish and tish. He hasn't an ounce of surplus fat on his splendid frame. He is tanned the color of a mahogany desk—which is not necessarily an indication of good condition, but most of all he is demonstrating in his workouts that he is in top shape. Following the workout we witnessed, and it was as strenuous as 10 or 11 rounds of fighting, he was hardly breathing hard—and that with a bad cold which has hampered his training for the last 10 or 12 days.

May Face Operation.

His hands—ah, there is another matter. Under the knuckles of both his left and right—particularly the left—is a serious condition. A condition likely to necessitate an operation for water on the joint. The bone on his left thumb is shattered, but rapidly healing. Judging from the way he punched his sparmates and the heavy bag about, his hands will hold up as long as they are needed in the Braddock bout.

His weight? That is presumably a deep, dark sceret.

"He hasn't been weighed," a press

Greens Viewed As Chief Jinx In U.S. Open

Score of 300 to Be Broken Only by Men of Few Putts, Is Belief.

ing a premium on approach shots. On these holes, in most cases, the backs of the greens are followed up by traps with the sand deeply furrowed.

To Be Even Faster.

After today's rounds, virtually all of the contestants concurred in the opinion that a 72-hole aggregate of 300 will be broken only if a player succeeds in getting down in the regulation two putts on each green. As fast as they are now, the greens will be faster when the first two-some tees off at 7:30 a. m. (Eastern standard time) Thursday, because they're going to be closely manicured on the eve of the championship.

As far as the traps are concerned, they are exceptionally severe on only two holes—the first and the tenth—with the 621-yard twelfth coming close to qualifying in this category. A good tee shot by 260 yards on either the first or the tenth can be easily penalized by a trap unless it is hammered down the middle of the fairway. Otherwise, the drive will catch a trap extending from the rough almost to the center of the fairway.

Few practice scores were reported, but among them was a par 72 turned in by Leo Diegel, of Philadelphia. He clipped two strokes off par on the front nine for 35 and then hit a shaky streak on the first four incoming holes to card a 37. As it was, he finished 3—3—3—two under par for the stretch—and holed out from 3 feet for a birdie 3.

Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., winner of the Metrpoolitan Open several days ago, and one of the hot pre-tournament favorites, playing with big Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, posted a 75, as did Dudley. Horton Smith, of Chicago, produced a 77.

Sarazen played with Al Espinosa, of Cleveland, and neither paid much notice of their scores, but devoted most of their attention to the greens. Sarazen said they reminded him of St. Andrews. The stocky campaigner didn't keep score on the outgoing side, but took 38 strokes on the second despite three three-putt greens.

Other scores included Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J., and Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles, 73s; Harry Cooper, Chicago; Johnny Goodman, Omaha amateur; Abe Espinosa, Chicago, and Pete O'Hara, Greensburg, 74s; Roland MacKenzie, Washington, D. C., and Harold McSpaden, Kansas City, 75s; Ted Luther, Youngstown, Ohio, and Rudy Knepper, New York amateur, 76s; Ky Laffoon and Horton Smith, Chicago; Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y.; Willie Macfarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., and Jimmy Hines, Garden City, N. Y., 77s, and Harry Gandy, Oklahoma City amateur, 79. McSpaden shot the first five holes in three under par and then became involved in the traps.

Evans Denies Tribe Will Get Hemsley

Once Tried, However, but Terms Were Too High.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 3.—Vice President L. E. McEvoy, of the St. Louis Browns, and Billy Bevans, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, joined today in a broad denial that they were considering a deal to send Rollo Hemsley, Brownie catcher, to Cleveland.

The denials came on the heels of a dispatch from the Ohio city quoting Alva Bradley, president of the Indians, as saying he had sent Evans here to negotiate for possession of "Rollicking Rollo."

"I went to New York when the Browns played there recently with an offer to buy Hemsley, but the terms were too high," explained Evans today. "I'm in St. Louis en route to Kansas City."

Miss Wethered Due to Draw 3,000 Fans

English Girl to Team With Fred McLeod Sunday at Columbia.

MEETING yesterday with members of the press, the Columbia Country Club committee, headed by H. King Cornwell, indicated that it expected at least 3,000 spectators to attend next Sunday's exhibition match featuring the only woman in the world capable of competing on even terms with men in golf—the one and only Joyce Wethered.

In a match with a distinct international flavor, the remarkable English girl with the flawless swing will team with Fred McLeod, Columbia pro, and one of Scotland's famous sons, against the American duo composed of Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, former three-time American women's champion, and Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro.

The match will start at 2 p. m.

Fine Reception.

George Hingston, former Philadelphia golf writer, now publicity counsel for John Wanamaker Store, sponsor of Miss Wethered's Nation-wide tour, told the committee of the wonderful reception accorded Miss Wethered in matches at Long Island, Ridgewood, N. J., and other places. In between her exhibition here the British stylist—finest shotmaker, man or woman, in the game today, according to Bobby Jones—will appear in Richmond and Baltimore.

She will arrive in town Sunday morning with Mrs. Vare, rival in many a stirring national championship, and will be honored at a luncheon at noon to be given by the Columbia women golfers.

All greens except the fifth, seventh and fifteenth will be roped off in big league fashion, and there will be ample parking space. Tickets, $1.10 each, are on sale at all golf clubs, Woodward & Lothrop's and Spalding's.

Cubs Check Cards' Streak; Win, 6 to 2

Also Keep From Dropping Into Fifth Place.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 3.—The St. Louis Cardinals' upward surge in the National League ended today when they dropped a 6-to-2 decision to the Chicago Cubs for their first defeat in seven games.

The defeat set the champions four full games back of the pace-setting New York Giants, who were idle.

Behind the effective pitching of Charley Root, the Cubs managed to keep out of the second division. A defeat would have dropped them to fifth place back of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Valley League Schedule Is Revised

Is Redrafted After Two Clubs Are Added to 6-Club Loop.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

HARRISONBURG, Va., June 3.—The revised schedule for the Valley League, which opens its season Saturday, was announced tonight by President George Holtzman. The schedule had to be redrafted after Staunton and Waynesboro were admitted at the last minute to make an eight-club circuit.

Each club will play three games a week. The first half ends on July 21 and the second half on Labor Day. Games will be played on all days except Mondays and Fridays. These are left blank for postponed contests.

An innovation in the circuit will be the playing of night baseball at Harrisonburg. The equipment is due to be in operation by June 15. This step was taken by the local club when there was some objection to the playing of Sunday baseball. All of the clubs will play at home on Sundays except Harrisonburg and Staunton. The Heurich Brewers, of Washington, the league's traveling entry, will play all of their games away from home.

The first half schedule:

Stocks Make Sharp Upturn; Shorts Cover

Rise Is Attributed to the Cessation of Selling; Volume Small.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Ceasing its lamentations for the NRA, the stock market rallied to register the sharpest average gain in nearly a month. Buyers were hesitant, however, and the rebound represented cessation of selling rather than renewal of large-scale buying. While advances of fractions to 3 points appeared throughout the list, the day's turnover was only 599,030 shares, the smallest for a five-hour session since April 4.

It was the first time the market as a whole had closed higher, however, since a week ago, and on that day, the Supreme Court's NRA decision came in the last few minutes of trading, and the market lacked time to digest it before closing.

The market seemed to gain its rallying power chiefly from short covering. Brokers attributed it chiefly to a better action of several of the commodity markets, and to a growing belief that industry would weather the abandonment of the NRA codes without disturbance save in a few lines.

Week-end business surveys mentioned better retail trade with more favorable weather in several areas, and continued pickup in residential building.

Corn Lateness Advances Price

Abnormal Rain Delays Planting; Wheat Is Lower.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 3.—Extremely wet weather that has led to dangerous lateness of corn planting gave a strong upward tilt to corn values today.

Particular anxiety among corn traders was aroused by drenching rains in Illinois, where it is estimated that only one-third of the 1935 corn crop has yet been planted, although normally 87 per cent of corn is planted before June. Much notice was also taken of reports showing that throughout 14 grain States the rainfall in May, 1935, has averaged 133 per cent of normal, compared with 41 per cent during May last year.

Corn closed strong at the day's top level, 1⅝-2⅜ cents over Saturday's finish, July 80½-80⅝, wheat ⅛-½ down, July 82½-82⅝, oats ⅝ to 1 cent up, and provisions 5 to 10 cents advanced.

Rye prices broke to a new low record for the season. The reason was further arrivals of foreign rye, together with apparent likelihood of enlarged domestic production. Oats traders took their cue mainly from action of corn. Provisions reflected an unexpected big decrease of Chicago werehouse stocks of lard.

170,404 Gas Stations; Individuals Own Most

A study of U. S. Bureau of Mines data discloses that four out of five filling stations are owned by individuals, and that more individuals are engaged in operating filling stations than in any other field of retail activity except the grocery business. There are in the United States 170,404 filling station, so far as the Bureau of Mines records show. The data of the bureau covers 155,734 individual owners of filling stations, not including owners of some 130,000 other sales outlets.

Associated Gas Revenues Gain In 12 Months

Increase of 3.7% More Than Offsets Rise in Operating Expenses.

New York, June 3.—Operations of Associated Gas and Electric Corporation and subsidiaries for the 12 months ended March 31, 1935, resulted in a balance of $10,241,864.42 after provision for retirements and Federal income taxes. Fixed charges and other deductions of Associated Gas and Electric Corporation amounted to $4,916,694.61, leaving a balance of $5,325,169.81.

Operating revenues were $85,045,639.63 for the period, an increase of 3.7 per cent over the 12 months ended March 31, 1934. The gain in operating revenues was sufficient to absorb the increase in operating expenses and taxes, making the net operating revenue 2.9 per cent higher than for the preceding 12 months.

The improvement in net operating revenue is encouraging, according to the company's statement, since preceding quarterly earnings reports for many past periods have consistently shown net operatnig revenue lower than for the corresponding 12 months' period of the preceding year.

Associated Gas Output Up.

New York, June 3.—For the week ended May 25, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 52,581,441 units, which is an increase of 0.7 per cent over the same week last year. Output for the four weeks to date was up 2.8 per cent over the comparable period last year.

Commercial Failures, Lowest in 15 Years, Likely to Show Sharp Increase as Codes Collapse; Rule of Survival of Fittest Held Boon in Long Run.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, June 3.—Statistics of commercial failures, as reported regularly by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., will be watched with special care over the next few months for indications of the concrete effects of the collapse of the NRA codes upon business enterprises, especially those of smaller size.

The contraction in the number of reported commercial failures has been one of the most remarkable business developments of the past year or so. While the abnormally numerous failures durin the depression years accelerated the elimination of marginal enterprises, and so made possible a sharp reduction in the number of failures during the recovery period, this factor does not explain the showing made. The failure statistics, standing alone, give a great deal of support to the view that the NRA codes, by tending to stabilize business costs and prices, sharply reduced the rate of mortality among business enterprises.

Dun & Bradstreet reported an average of 1,015 commercial failures monthly during 1934, a decline of 34 per cent from the average of 1,692 reported during 1933. Furthermore, the reported liabilities of all failed concerns during 1934 averaged $22,020,000 monthly, as compared with an average of $41,900,000 the year before, a decline of 47 per cent. These figures do not include bank failures.

Failures Far Fewer Than in 1929.

A more spectacular comparison is that between 1934 and 1929, usually recognized as the peak of the post-war boom. Commercial failures averaged 1,909 monthly in 1929, or 90 per cent more than in 1934. Liabilities of failed concerns averaged $40,270,000 monthly in 1929, or 80 per cent greater than last year.

In fact, the number of commercial failures last year was the lowest since 1920, while the liabilities reported for failed enterprises were the smallest since 1919. Even if full allowance is made for changes in the method of compiling such statistics during this period, the comparative showing is truly phenomenal.

So far this year, the downward trend of failures has continued. During the five months ended May 31, the number of commercial failures reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was approximately 5 per cent below that of the corresponding period in 1934, while the liabilities were more than 25 per cent less. Hence, both as regards number and liabilities, the commercial failure record this year is the best in more than a decade and a half.

From a number of industries come authoritative statements that the NRA, despite its tendency to raise costs of operation, helped to make this showing possible by placing weaker and stronger concerns upon a more nearly equal competitive footing. The various code provisions designed to eliminate direct and indirect price cutting were most largely responsible for this. Now that code restrictions no longer apply, the pressure from retailers, especially large department and chain store enterprises, for lower prices for their customers may soon be reflected in forcing marginal enterprises out of business, it is predicted.

Temptation to Cut Costs In Effort to Survive.

Pressure on marginal enterprises is also the greatest threat to the stability of the present structure of wages and working hours. Faced with financial extinction, many enterprises will be tempted to slash their costs sharply, in a last effort to survive. Hence, an increase in the number of commercial failures will be watched with concern by labor leaders, who know from experience how this will affect labor policies of weaker concerns seeking to survive, especially now that code restrictions have been lifted.

On the other hand, economists generally and not a few industrialists will regard a moderate increase in the rate of mortality among business concerns as a healthy development. The effort to keep relatively inefficient and high cost enterprises in business by crystallizing costs and selling prices at a relatively high level is costly to consumers, they point out and stands in the way of economic progress. In the past, a steady lowering of production costs and selling prices has permitted a corresponding rise in the standard of living of wage and salary earners, even where their money wages and salaries did not rise.

The New Deal sought to raise wages and prices simultaneously, thus protecting the margin of profit of business enterprises and, by equalizing competitive conditions in considerable measure, reducing commercial failures.

The sudden lifting of code controls opens the way to a renewal of more aggressive competition and the rule of the survival of the fittest. This, classical economists generally feel, will inure in the long run to the public good. The question has been raised, however, whether it is really always the fittest that survives in an age when many enterprises, especially larger ones, can often raise funds freely in the capital market and thus pass losses back to investors.

Retail Sales By Local Stores Increase 23.5%

Is Largest of Any Reported in Fifth District During April.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

A gain of 23.5 per cent in retail trade by leading Washington department stores during April as compared with the same month a year ago was reported yesterday by the Fifth Feredal Reserve Bank in Richmond.

The increase was the largest amassed by any of the 31 cities in the district. It includes the States of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina and the District of Columbia. Average of the territory was set at 20.8 per cent.

Cumulative sales in the first four months of the year increased 13.9 per cent here, more than three times greater than the sales increases reported by any other city in the district. The average gain was put at 7.9 per cent.

Building Leads.

Approximate value of building permits issued here during April led every other city with a total of $1,365,175, more than a third of the value planned in the entire district. Baltimore, the second place city, reported $840,420 of projected construction.

Failures reported in the District declined 22 per cent below the preceding month to 45. Liabilities of the defunct firms decreasing 72 per cent to $295,432, from the previous month's total of $1,062,438. Debits to individual accounts in Washington increased to $185,408 during the 30 days ended May 8, from the total of $166,030 reported during the same period of 1934.

Total loans and discounts in the district's 28 reporting banks declined by $8,631,000 between April 10 and May 8, this year, loans on securities showing a drop of $6,736,000 and all other loans declining by $1,895,000. The banks also decreased their investments in stocks and bonds by $9,560,000 during the past month, but their reserve balances at the Federal Reserve Bank rose by $16,731,000.

Cash on Increase.

Cash in vault showed an increase of $199,000 between April 10 and May 8. Aggregate deposits rose by $6,838,000 during the four weeks under review, demand deposits gaining $5,466,000 and time deposits $1,372,000. None of the reporting banks were borrowing at the Reserve Bank on April 10 or May 8.

Between May 9, 1934, and May 8, 1935, figures in the statement of the 28 reporting banks show a number of material changes. Loans on stocks and bonds declined by $8,988,000 during the year, and all other loans decreased by $18,009,000, a total drop in loans and discounts, of $26,997,000.

On the other hand, the banks increased their investments in securities, chiefly Governments, by $25,280,000 during the year, and their aggregate reserve balance at the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond rose by $21,273,000. Cash in vault on the 1935 date showed an increase of $371,000 over the amount on hand a year earlier.

Total deposits rose by $28,178,000, of which demand deposits accounted for $25,010,000 and time deposits for $3,168,000.

Bankers Return From Conclave.

Washington bankers were back at their desks yesterday after the most successful convention held by the District of Columbia Bankers Association in its history. Many notables in the finance world, including Marriner Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and F. Gloyd Awalt, deputy comptroller of the currency, and seven presidents of local banks, took part in the four-day conclave at Hot Springs, Va.

Winners of the final sports event were announced by A. Scott Offutt, chairman, at the conclusion of the meet. The I. A. "Pop Fleming Cup" went to Fred Towers, with Roger J. Whiteford second, Robert H. Lacey third, and George O. Vass fourth.

Horace Smithy won the Hibbs Golf Cup, Charles H. Doing second, Wilmer J. Waller third, and Frank G. Addison, jr., fourth. The Shannon & McLachlen Cup, class A, was corried off by Robert V. Fleming, who won two cups but was allowed to acecpt but one. Norman B. Frost was second, M. E. Horton third, and B. E. Hinton fourth. Class B was won by Thomas J. Groom, with N. N. Wright second, A. D. Driscoll third, and John Lewis Smith fourth.

The Mangan Tennis Cup was won permanently by Charles Carroll Morgan, with Frank M. Perley second.

Steel Capacity Off Sharply to 39.5%

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Steel operations as estimated today by the American Iron & Steel Institute are at the lowest level since last December at 39.5 per cent of capacity. A week ago the operating ratio was calculated by the institute at 42.2, and the indicated decline of 2.8 percentage points is one of sharpest recessions recorded in the recent downward movement. A month ago the industry was operating at an average of 42.2 per cent.

Utility Heads Bitterly Score Federal Critics

'Fraud, Deceit, Dishonesty and Oppression,' Terms Used by Speaker.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 3.—A double-barreled attack against government activities aimed at public utilities was made by two speakers before cheering members of the Edison Electric Institute at their annual convention today.

Lashing out at Washington critics, Bernard F. Weadock, managing director of the institute, and Frank W. McLaughlin, president of the Puget Sound Power and Light Co., Seattle, provoked vigorous applause from among the 800 public utility men present by charging "fraud," "deceit," "oppression," and "executioners," in referring to Government attacks against public utilities.

"The eight-year investigation of the electric power and light industry by the Federal Trade Commission was predestined to be a propaganda vehicle to further the whims and fancies of those who would destroy the American system of private business for private profit," Weadock asserted.

He charged that 85 per cent of the personnel employed in making the investigation "were without knowledge or training in the utility business; that the report was prepared by subordinates, in conformity with the bureaucratic practice existing in Washington, and sanctioned by the commissioners without having read it."

"I am unable," he said, "to find more suitable words than these in characterizing the investigation and findings of the Federal Trade Commission—fraud, deceit, misrepresentation, dishonesty, breach of trust and oppression."

McLaughlin told members that the power industry was "on the spot" with the Federal Government as an opponent in the triple role of "oppressor, competitor and executioner."

He told members that they must "explode the yard-stick fallacies" and adopt other measures to put the industry back on its feet.

Power and Rail Bonds Are Up; Industrials Dip

Government Issues Are in Demand; Trading Is Restricted.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—The rails, utilities and United States Government securities displayed a rather firm undertone in today's bond market, but profit-taking in some of the industrials gave the list a ragged appearance.

Selectivity was the rule throughout, with traders exhibiting more than the usual amount of caution in making commitments. It was the dullest day's session since February 11 last, transfers totaling only $6,756,000, par value. The Associated Press averages of the utilities and carriers closed with small advances while the industrial composite lost .4 of a point.

Although a more optimistic view was taken of the NRA situation, the news was not considered especially bullish. Current steel operations were estimated at 39.5 per cent of capacity, compared with 42.2 per cent in the previous week.

Federal loans moved up one thirty-second to six thirty-seconds of a point as the Treasury summed up its fiscal year's deficit at $3,133,471,295. This compared with the President's budget message forecast to Congress of $4,869,418,338.

Cotton Prices Rally at Close

Recovery Narrows Net Losses for Day to 7 to 14 Points.

New York, June 3 (AP).—Cotton was irregular but generally lower today under domestic and foreign liquidation. While final prices were close to the best for the day on trade buying, they still showed net losses of 7 to 14 points.

Initial losses of 22 to 33 points reflected heavy selling for Liverpool, Continental and Far Eastern account combined with liberal offerings from Wall Street and commission houses.

Unofficial Washington reports over the week-end tended to cast doubt on the outlook for a 12-cent loan on the next cotton crop, and increased nervousness over the agricultural control program. Late in the session the market had rallied, almost $1 a bale from the lows, on covering and price fixing.

Unwanted rains in the Central and Western belts and reports that the manager of the producers' pool was considering taking delivery on July contracts if that position ruled at 12 cents or less when delivery time arrived, may have brought in some of the buying.

Belle Haven's Golf Marked By Upsets

16 Qualify for Matches; Fort Hunt CCC Faces Fort Washington.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., June 3.—Several upsets featured the qualifying rounds of the Belle Haven golf tournament over the week-end. The major upset was that of Dr. Samuel B. Moore over Howard Bucknell, one of the club's best players, who was defeated by Dr. Samuel B. Moore.

In other upsets, Charlie Rollins won over Jess Willard in 19 holes; Dick Marshall defeated Charles Holden, jr.; Clarence Robinson won over Louis Kane, and Frankie Clarke bowed to Tom Sebrell.

In all, 16 qualified for match play, which will continue through June.

The first of a three-game series for the "Championship of the Potomac" will open at 5:15 p. m. tomorrow when the Fort Hunt CCC meets Fort Washington Post.

The CCC boys will be fighting to keep intact a ten-game winning streak.

McLean's winning streak was stretched to five games in the Old Dominion League when it defeated the Clarendon Business Men yesterday. The Business Men were dropped to third place and the Fort Hunt Rangers maintained second place by winning over Park Lane.

With a comparatively small track squad, Alexandria High School finished its current campaign with the most successful record in the school's history. The Twins scored in every dual meet held, and then went on to capture second place in the annual carnival at Charlottesville. Bob Garner's fast stepping squad won over Episcopal High's "B" squad, Washington and Lee, Silver Spring and Fredericksburg.

Capt. Shu, with his one-man track team performances was easily the outstanding man on the team, scoring 24 points in a single meet. Leroy Fones was chosen to lead the team for 1936.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The written word has a strange fascination for the illiterate clients of Arabian charm-writers in northern Nigeria. Not only unable to read, they seem also unable to grasp even the principle of writing—and in their superstitious way charge it all up to magic of some kind or another. Charm-writers and letter-writers fare well in Africa, for the very profession bespeaks a knowledge and ability beyond their understanding.

The supersition is pampered, and charm-writers make their living writing a few lines from the Koran on a piece of paper to be worn in a leather bag about the neck. Another, far stranger remedy often tried is the drinking of Koran prayers. This rite begins with the writing of parts of the Koran in chalk on a board. The script is then washed off the board—and the water is swallowed or applied externally.

One of the strangest railroad tunnels in the world is that on the Romsdal line in Norway, where the shaft enters and leaves the same side of the mountain—getting nowhere except into the mountain and out again. It was necessary to penetrate the mountain for nearly a mile so that the grade would not be too steep. The dotted line indicates the course of the line inside the mountain.

sell to a starting role still sticks. Russell gave an impressive performance for six innings in his Philadelphia debut last Saturday.

The Red Sox return to Washington with one new face in their lineup. At second base will be the accomplished veteran, Oscar Melillo, bought from the Browns for $25.000, and Outfielder Julius Solters. They return here, too, with Cronin hailing the success of Lefty Grove's comeback. In his last appearance, Grove shut out the Yankees with six hits and uncoiled his famous fire ball with the speed of yore.

Martin L. Rittenhouse, of Washington, D. C., was chosen manager of the tennis squad.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

TO a Mr. Havener, of Washington, initials unknown, falls the honor of having caught the largest rock reported from the river this season. Fishing with his brother last Saturday in the neighborhood of the Chain Bridge, he hooked and landed a fine nine-pounder. He was using cut herring for bait.

Many of these deliciously-flavored fish are being caught at the bridge right now and although most of them are around the three-pound size, the big fellows are due to show up on any tide.

Plenty of big cats are being taken from the Potomac these days, as well as perch. Not many, however, seem to be fishing for black bass, which are there, and of good size. The river is clear but it was a little rough yesterday, the south wind having backed the tide up with gusto.

Bay Reports Good.

NEARLY every fisherman we talked with yesterday reported angling success over Sunday. Benedict, Md., and Tilghman's were the starting points for many successful parties, with hardhead angling predominating.

Quite a number of blues were caught in the bay, the best catch being reported by a party of five men who went to St. Jeromes Creek, on advice of the Wolf Sporting Goods Co. They landed 23 blues, weighing up to 9 pounds, 7 trout and 255 hardhead—a fine catch for a single day on the water.

Another successful blue fisherman last week was Robert Fowler, who tackled Southwest Middles with two friends, Lem Orem and S. Corridon. They landed 18 big ones, two channel bass and nearly 300 hardhead. The party had the time of their life, so they say, fighting the blues and channel bass.

To hit Southwest Middles, go to St. Jeromes Creek, Ridge or Point Lookout. There are plenty of boats available for the 12-mile trip. If the wind stays in the south for a day or two, there should be excellent fishing there.

Inlet Reported Fair.

FROM Carlton F. Howell, yesterday, we had an enthusiastic report of a trip he had just made down to Oregon Inlet.

His party only fished a few hours on last Thursday and landed 31 blues, all over 5 and up to 9 pounds. They also garnered a 4-pound mackerel, the first we have had reported. Their boat captain was O. Bassnight, a newcomer to Manteo, and Mr. Howell assured us that he found his services excellent. The captain has the largest boat in the fishing fleet at Manteo, well equipped and clean. His number is Manteo 39.

No channel bass have been reported from Oregon Inlet for the past several days. It is doubtful if fishing conditions down there will be as good again this season as it was a month ago. There will be fish there and plenty of them but the big schools seem broken up and departed.

Casting Tournament.

WE'VE been asked by the Monroe-Pike Sportsmen's Association, of Buck Hill Falls, Pa., to announce the fact their club will hold the first annual casting tournament Saturday, June 8, with handsome prizes and trophies in fly, bait, dry-fly, distance and free-for-all casting.

To date 65 entries, representing 23 angling clubs over America, have been received for the event, to be annually known as the Pocono Fly Casting Tournament.

Trout Season Fair.

WITH the end of the trout season just a week or two off, anglers are reporting only mediocre success in Virginia and Maryland waters.

Pennsylvania streams are low and clear now and fair reports are coming from men who have recently fished there. The only trouble is the fact that small fish are the rule. Pennsylvania has a 6-inch trout law and well-stocked though the streams are, there is a dearth of worthwhile-sized fish.

Max's Training Held Akin to Comedy

agent will inform you. "He hasn't been weighed because nobody in the crowd will buy scales. That's a story for you, a champion with no scales."

Baer really weights between 215 and 216 right now. He will enter the ring at 211. He weighed 210 for Carnera.

Braddock is training for a Baer who throws long overhand rights—the same Baer who toppled Carnera. Baer will not use that punch in the fight. The damage he will inflict will be inflicted by a short, straight right, or a right uppercut.

Braddock is training himself to block a left hook to the body. Baer will not use that punch much. He will substitute a left jab to the head. Baer has discovered that under the rules, he may use a form of the pivot blow. He is practicing that maneuver and may use it in the battle.

Baer's real routine (and you may toss out of the window all publicity stories to another effect) is to rise at 7:30 and do five to seven miles of roadwork. Honest. Then breakfast and some moping about until time for his afternoon workout. After the workout, he is rubbed and bundled off to the estate.

Goes to Movie.

Comes the night and his trainers' woes increase. He is escorted to a movie, where he always is met by between 25 and 30 youngsters. They surround him and he takes them into the pictures. They serve as a bodyguard, beating off the attempts of anyone to approach their hero.

After the movie, Maxie is carefully escorted home, where he is permitted to play pinochle or clown with his brother Buddy until 10:30. At that hour, he is bundled off to bed like an obstinate child—and don't think his bedroom isn't watched during the night.

Many amusing stories are told at the camp, most of them not to be believed.

"Max put $8,800 in a safety deposit vault about a year ago," we were told. "Then he lost the key and couldn't remember what bank the money was in. Hoffman knew, but wouldn't tell him. Almost a year later he was walking past a bank, remembered that was where his money was, withdrew it and blew it within a week."

Most of the other stories don't bear repetition. They are not parlor stories. They probably aren't true.

Oh, yes, who do we think will win the Baer-Braddock business? Baer, by a knockout. What round? Let Maxie tell you.

"I'm not going to try

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Because Arthur Godfrey's bedside broadcasts are so much better than his studio ones, WJSV is seriously considering keeping him in bed for the rest of his announcing career. The amateur show bobbed up with brighter spots last week; the daily Sundial puts a chill of forgetfulness on your second cup of coffee.

But seriously, the added attraction on the Sundial is Engineer Donald Mehaffey, whose conversation contains a naturalness that any announcer might envy. Far from being a Godfrey stooge, his part of the two-way chatter is nosing up to top place in the Sundial's listener interest. Perhaps it's because Donald doesn't try to be funny—and that's a novelty on any program.

"Aunt Sue" will present Colleen Moore on her Wednesday program, WMAL, 5:15 p. m. Miss Moore will discuss her doll house, now on exhibit at Landsburghs.

High-spots:

Esther Johnsson, concert pianist, presents a recital of folk music of the Balkan Peninsula. She will supplement the music with discussion. WJSV, 3:45 p. m.

Marriner S. Eccles, Federal Reserve Governor, discusses "The Consumer's Stake in Sound Money." WJSV, 9:45 p. m.

"The Prince of Pilsen," is heard on WRC, 9 p. m.

Victor McLaglen makes his bow in "Red Trails" on WMAL, 8 p. m.

Mildred Stone, California singer, guests with Bing Crosby, 8 p. m. WJSV.

George F. von Ostermann, linguist and compiler of a recent many-tongue dictionary, is interviewed on WMAL, 8:30 p. m.

With each release from the Radio Institute of Audible Art, one's respect for the institute increases. Yesterday the mail brought one of their finest offerings—an answer to the objections to children's radio programs, an annotated list of present recommended programs, compiled by the Child Study Association of America, and a booklet "Radio and Children," by Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, director of the association.

Because of the institute's intelligent handling of the children's programs problem, it merits a detailed report, which will appear on Sunday's radio page.

Godfrey's Gazette will be moved ahead to 10 o'clock tonight. Helen Elly, the small, blonde singer, is on her way to California, so Margaret McCravy, who sings in numerous trios with her brothers, and on Sunday's Singing Violin spot, will do vocals.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

The Collapse of the Brief-Case Era.

Outlawing of NRA codes is going to strike the white paper, brief-case and law businesses a terrific blow. Nearly everybody you met during the past two years was either going to or from Washington with a lawyer and a brief case full of written arguments.

* * * *

If it hadn't been for NRA a lot of lawyers would have been on relief long ago. Business may have been dead in other lines, but in the law offices there was always somebody trying to find out where he stood, and, if so, what to do about it.

* * * *

It is going to be pretty hard for those attorneys to become accustomed to coming to the office and finding nobody who wants to sue the Government, enjoin Uncle Sam or divorce an Eagle.

* * * *

And what a falling off there is going to be in overstuffed brief cases.

* * * *

Since 1933 America has seemed like a great mass movement of bulging portfolios.

* * * *

Most of the country's visible energy seemed centered in the business of stuffing brief cases with protests, amendments, suggestions and counter-propositions.

* * * *

If all the foolscap paper used by business men and lawyers in correspondence with the code authorities could be placed in a single pile it would extend 20 miles into the stratosphere.

* * * *

And enormous as the cost of piling it that way would be, it would probably prove cheaper than doing anything else with it.

* * * *

The asylums of America are full of people who got there as a result of code conferences.

* * * *

And they are reluctant to come out until they are sure the Supreme Court decision is final.

* * * *

Nobody will ever be able to figure out the cost of those codes to America in railroad fares, bad cigars, typewriter ribbons, carbon paper, quick lunches and indigestion.

* * * *

It seems as if everybody in the country was busy approving or disapproving codes they didn't begin to understand in the first place. Writing substitute codes had become a national industry second in volume only to the industry of trying to get an answer from the Government on the proposed substitutes.

* * * *

It was only during the last two weeks that business men and the Government really came to a fairly definite understanding on what the codes meant. And then the court called off the game on account of darkness.

* * * *

Is that fair to our lawyers? Answer "Yes" or "No!"

His wife no lean could eat;

U. S. Employes Will Get Leave To See Parade

Half-Holiday Next Tuesday Promised Workers to View Shrine Event.

A chariot race, so authentic that the only thing lacking will be a Caesar in the grandstand, is promised for tomorrow by the Shrine convention committee.

The contest will be in the nature of a test run for the Roman chariot race to be staged along Pennsylvania avenue on pageant night, June 13, Robert P. Smith, convention director, said yesterday. Tomorrow's preliminary will be held at Fort Myer at 1 p. m., with soldiers at the reins of each of the four-horse chariots.

District Government employes will receive a half-holiday next Tuesday so that they may see the Shriners' morning parade, Capt. Howard F. Clark, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, reported to the general committee yesterday. He is chairman of the Government activities committee of the convention.

Arrangements by which the Capital's several transit and sightseeing systems will be coordinated and expanded to accommodate upward of 100,000 visiting Shriners, their families and friends were disclosed by Maj. Otto Engelman, chairman of the committee on bus, street car and boat transportation.

Plans have been made to handle 40,000 Mount Vernon excursionists by boat and bus during convention week. Special bus lines will be established to bring visiting nobles into the city from Union Station and the Capital's outskirts. From June 10 to 12, inclusive, there will be three river outings daily on the steamer Potomac.

The Potomac also will carry 2,500 Shriners to Quantico, Va., for the celebration there June 13. Other thousands will go by bus and private automobile. Bus trips to Mount Vernon will begin next Sunday. Those by water, via the Wilson Line, will be conducted June 11 to 13, inclusive.

Construction and installation of grandstand seats probably will be completed Saturday, William C. Miller, chairman of that committee, reported. Twenty thousand out of a total of 50,000 seats are in the Pavilion of Omar, Pennsylvania avenue between Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets, and the remainder will be located in Pennsylvania avenue from the Treasury east to Constitution avenue.

Information booths at the city's entrances will be placed in operation Saturday night and shut down Monday night, said Edwin C. Dutton, chairman of the information committee. Those at Union Station and at railroad sidings, where Shriners' sleeping cars are berthed, will be kept open throughout convention week, Mr. Dutton said.

King Felicitates Yukon Explorers

King George V of England has sent his congratulations to the National Geographic Society's Yukon Expedition for its first crossing of Mt. St. Elias mountain range between Alaska and Canada, the society said yesterday.

Two of the mountain peaks on the Canadian side of the border were named for King George and Queen Mary. A newly discovered glacier, 40 miles long, was named for former President Abbott Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University. Bradford Washburn, of Cambridge, Mass., is leader of the expedition.

The society reported that fire has hampered the explorations of the groups. Flames starting from a stove burned one tent and a sleeping bag. Three dogs of one team fell into a 70-foot-deeep crevice in the ice, but were rescued by men lowered by rope. The last lap, along the Alaskan coast, was made in a collapsible rubber boat.

Francis Bowes Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, spoke yesterday at the flag day exercises of the thirty-fifth annual commencement program of National Cathedral School. The flag, highest honor attained by a member of the graduating class, was awarded to Rosa Packard Laird, of Wilmington, Del.

Mr. Sayre said: "It is for your generation to lead our country back out of the land of shadows. What is enduring is, not the present economic dislocations and maladjustments, but the nobility of human nature, its patient bravery, its constant reaching upward toward goodness.

Mother Church Of Scientists Selects Leader

6,000 Hear New President Extol Faith as Aid in Depression.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 3.—A. Barry Bacon, of Boston and Marshfield, Mass., today was elected president of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, at the annual meeting attended by approximately 6,000 members.

Bacon, a native of Pontiac, Mich., and a former resident of Washington, in his address declared that "when the whole world was struggling under unemployment, lack, want and woe, Christian Science had come to the rescue of many," and that through its application many had been healed of erroneous conditions.

He stressed the fact that "in the midst of this period the building of a new publishing house was wisely undertaken," furnishing employment, and placing much money in circulation with the result that "an example of courage and perseverance in right-doing was presented."

Bacon succeeds Dr. John M. Brewer, associate professor at Harvard Graduate School of Education.

Two new readers elected to serve in the Mother Church for the next three years are Ralph B. Scholfield, of London, England, and Miss Florence Siever Middaugh, formerly of Denver and Los Angeles.

Edward L. Ripley and Ezra W. Palmer, both of Brookline, Mass., were re-elected treasurer and clerk, respectively.

Miss Rosamond Wright, manager of the department of branches and practitioners, reported 73 new branches of the Mother Church, 47 in North America, one in South America, 17 in Europe, two in Asia, two in Africa and four in Australia.

Roland R. Harrison, manager of the Publishing Society, commenting on an encouragingly higher circulation trend for all periodicals, said the average daily net paid circulation of the Christian Science Monitor for the six months ending March 28, 1935, was 136,608.
